RUSSIA QUIET SINCE THE DUMA WAS DISSOLVED

Precautionary Measures of Police Prevented Any Disturbances Sunday.

WORKMEN DEMONSTRATION IS ANTICIPATED TODAY

An Outbreak of Agrarian Disorders Is Also Expected as Soon as the Peasants Learn of the Action of the Czar.

St. Petersburg, June 16.—The dissolution of the second Douma was received throughout St. Petersburg with perfect tranquility, thanks to the precautionary measures, and no place in Russia, so far as is known, were there any serious disturbances.

Demonstrations among St. Petersburg workmen are anticipated tomorrow, but the authorities are not alarmed. They profess to be chiefly apprehensive over the possibility of rioting and racial excesses in Odessa and Kiev and other cities where party feeling runs high. An outbreak of agrarian disorders in several regions of the empire is anticipated later, when the peasantry learn of the dissolution, but a spirit of quiet confidence in the ability of the government to handle the situation prevails in administrative circles.

News of the dissolution reached St. Petersburg papers too late for their last editions, but the public was quickly informed through extras and great posters set out by the police at all street corners containing the ukase announcing the dissolution and the imperial manifesto.

Little knots of readers clustered around these the whole day, attentively perusing the manifesto, the phrasing of which was calculated to appeal to the patriotism of the lower classes. Little enthusiasm or excitement, however, was evoked, and many of the readers, as they turned away, spat silently upon the ground as a sign of their deepest contempt.

Troops Are Massed.

Though General Drachefsky, prefect of police, was nominally in charge, the provisions for public safety were virtually in the hands of General Hazenkampf, the aide of Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch, who returned to Krasnoye-Selo to assume command of the combined garrison, including the guard corps, the Thirty-seveenth infantry division, a large force of cavalry and Cossacks and several machine gun detachments. The military was chiefly disposed in the industrial section, but a strong force occupied the Tauride palace vicinity. A portion of the Tzarkuzvk regiment garrisoned the palace, while the squads of cuirassers were stationed in the court yards of adjoining buildings.

Nobody, not even douma officials, was allowed to enter the precincts of the palace. A laconic notice was posted on the gates announcing that "former deputies" would receive their salaries upon application to the chancellory of the empire.

Reports were in circulation during the day that the workmen were planning a great demonstration in front of the palace, but they did not appear, and only occasional sightseers visited the building.

The officer in command of the troops said that he had orders to disperse any crowds collecting without parley, and not to spare the bullets in case of necessity.

During the night nine of the sixteen social democratic leaders specifically named in the government indictment, including Prince Tzertzeretell and M. Dzhaparidge, were taken into custody. The other seven succeeded in eluding the elaborate preparations for their arrests. Two secret service men, with signed warrants, had been assigned to follow each deputy and serve the warrants as soon as the ukase was promulgated. They were instructed to follow their men to the frontier is necessary, but the deputies succeeded in making their escape. Among those who have not yet been arrested are Mozel, the report of whose capture was unfounded and M. Alexinsky, who has not returned to Russia.

Text of Czar's Manifesto.

The following is the full text of the emperor's manifesto:

"We, Nicholas II., by the grace of God, emperor of all the Russias, czar of Poland, grand duke of Finland, etc., declare to all our faithful subjects that, in conformity with our order and instructions since the dissolution of the first duma, our government has adopted a series of successful measures to pacify the country and establish the affairs of state in regular course.

"The second dumo convoked by us was summoned to contribute, according to our sovereign will, to the pacification of Russia, principally by the work of legislation, without which the life of a state and the perfection of its administration is impossible; next by an examination of the budget of revenue and expenditure, which ensures regularity in national finance, and finally, by the use of the right of addressing interpellations to the government with a view to establishing everywhere truth and justice.

"Entrusting these tasks to your elected representatives, the nation places upon them, by that very trust, a very heavy responsibility, and it was their sacred duty to use their rights in wise labor for the welfare and the strengthening of the Russian state. Such were our ideas and desires when we gave to the nation new principles for the life of the state.

"To our sorrow, a considerable section

GOING AT HIGH SPEED BIG MACHINE STRIKES COLLEGE PARK DEPOT

Two Men Thrown From Their Automobile, and One Badly Injured in the Fall.

MACHINE IS WRECKED AND DEPOT INJURED

Chauffeur Frank McArthur Suffers Serious Injuries, While W. C. Corless, of LaGrange, Is Badly Bruised and Cut—Witnesses Testify to the Speed of the Auto.

Speeding through College park at the alleged rate of fifty miles an hour yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, the big machine of W. C. Corless, of LaGrange, Ga., swerved from its course and plunged wildly into the depot.

The car was utterly ruined, a part of the depot, a brick structure, torn away by the force of the concussion, and the two occupants of the car tossed out and dashed unconscious to the ground.

Prompt medical attention given them by Dr. C. M. Curtis of College Park, mayor of the city, and developed the fact that Frank McArthur of 115½ South Pryor street, the chauffeur, was seriously wounded, and his employer, W. C. Corless, a partner of Dr. Frank Ridley, of LaGrange, in the automobile business, slightly injured.

McArthur suffered a broken left arm, a badly hurt right knee, and injuries to his skull, while Corless was badly bruised, cut on the knee and on the face.

McArthur was sent to the Elkin Goldsmith sanitarium in an ambulance, and there an operation was performed in the afternoon by Dr. Goldsmith. It was stated that he was very seriously injured, but it was believed that he would recover from his hurts.

The occupants of the machine were on their way to LaGrange when the accident occurred. The machine made the trip from Atlanta to College Park, at a rapid rate of speed.

Many witnesses to the accident in College Park testify that the car was going at a frightful speed. One of them stated that the car ran over a dog just as it reached the depot and that this turned the auto from its course just enough to send it hurtling into the depot.

Serious Accident Averted.

Another witness was of the opinion that had not the dog chanced to be in the way, causing the turn and the depot smash, that a more serious accident would have been the result, as a number of ladies were very near the scene, and he believed had the car continued on its elected course it would have mowed them down in its path.

Marshal Creel, of College Park, who was a witness to the smash, made a case against the occupants of the car for driving at a reckless rate of speed. Copies of charges were given. The trial will be held tonight at College Park. Mr. Corless was well enough to leave in the afternoon for his home in LaGrange, but he will return to stand his trial.

COTTON CROP IS 40 DAYS LATE

Reports Received From Louisiana and Southern Mississippi.

GREAT ACREAGE DECREASE

Cotton Plant Improved in Louisiana and Mississippi During the Past Two Months, but Even With Perfect Weather Crop Will Be Late.

New Orleans, June 16.—The Picayune's weekly cotton crop report tomorrow will say:

"With vigorous treatment during the last two months of warm, fair weather, the cotton plant has improved from 35 to 50 per cent where properly tilled, according to reports from correspondents covering the whole of Louisiana and the southern half of Mississippi. With another week of fair weather practically all grass will be killed and new cotton chopped out. The old crop is necessarily delicate and dwarfed, and the plant, because of unprecedented conditions, was left spindling and weak. The crop is still from thirty to forty days behind last year, notwithstanding every energy have been concentrated in the field to ridding the plants of weeds and grass. In some sections it was impossible to obtain satisfactory results, even with improved implements and experienced labor, rank vegetation resisting evry effort.

"Claims of decrease in acreage range from 50 to 70 per cent, pests of various kinds, being an equally contributing cause with unfavorable weather. However, the high estimate of 70 per cent decrease cannot be applied generally. Only in some lowlands and weevil-ridden sections is this condition found.

"The plant is blooming and fruiting nicely where the most favorable conditions have prevailed. Perfect weather, however, must continue through June. Even with this advantage, it is estimated the crop will be late.

"Slight hail and local showers in some sections caused no material change and did not delay field work. Boll weevil ravages are reported in the parishes of Winn, Red River, St. Landry and DeSoto, Louisiana; Hinds county, Mississippi, complains of more shank; Lawrence county, Mississippi, of worms, and Lincoln parish, Louisiana, of lice. The paris green poisoning theory has been accepted throughout the Red River section, in Louisiana, the treatment being applied even while the plant is bare of blooms or bolls. Locusts are reported in Avoyelles parish, Louisiana.

"The submerging of a vast cotton area on Gillespie island, Concordia parish, Louisiana, worked no material damage, the plant having been scraped out, as a rule, as the flood receded.

"Planters complain of lack of labor. This handicap affects practically all of the territory indicated and may be the indirect cause of greater injury than unfavorable weather has done to the crop."

Crop Is Still Quite Late.

Memphis, Tenn., June 16.—The Commercial-Appeal will tomorrow print the following summary of its special cotton reports:

"Favorable weather as regards temperature, sunshine and rainfall worked a distinct improvement in the cotton crop during the week ending with Thursday, June 13, the plant having grown and looks much healthier, though still quite small. Cultivation proceeded rapidly and in many parts of the belt the crop has been made clean. Grass is still complained of, however, from all sections, save the three most eastern states of the belt. It is worse in the southern parts of the Mississippi valley. Another week of fair weather will witness the completion of cultivation and probably a clean crop.

"The temper of the farmers has changed greatly and the ideas of a total crop failure are no longer held. They have given way to hope. The crop is still quite late, evidence of this being the small size of the plant.

"Boll weevil are numerous in the older infested sections of the southwest and are now doing damage to the young plants.

"Bad stands are still complained of, and from nearly all sections reports of occasional replanting are heard."

Chiefs Want More Men.

Macon, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—The chief of the Macon fire department and the chief of police have made known the fact that the work of their respective positions requires more men than they have at present. When everything is quiet there are plenty of policemen and when there are no fires there are plenty of firemen, so the chiefs say, but when there is a riot or fire their departments are short on men. It is probable that at least two new firemen and as many additional policemen will be secured.

Dr. Dargan Makes Many Friends.

Macon, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—Dr. E. C. Dargan, the new pastor of the First Baptist church, late professor of polemics in the Southern Baptist Theological seminary at Louisville, Ky., preached his third and fourth sermons here today. Both the morning and night services were largel yattended, and listened to with the keenest interest. Dr. Dargan has been in the city only ten days, and has made a host of friends in this short time.

Roosevelt Policies to Be Condemned

Denver, Col., June 16.—Of farreaching importance will be the public lands convention which will meet at the Broadway theater Tuesday morning next, and will be in session for three days. Informal discussions among the delegates already on the ground lead to the conclusion that President Roosevelt's policies, as to western land and irrigation regulations, will be condemned by the convention in a conservative, deliberate manner, without mixing policies in the matter.

Suicide After a Debauch.

Knoxville, Tenn., June 16.—News reached here today of the suicide at Townsend, in Blount county, of Tom Richards, head bookkeeper for Shea Bros., large lumber manufacturers at that place. Richards died by shooting himself twice in the heart region. Despondency from a debauch and a nervous fit is assigned as the cause of the deed. Richards was 36 years of age and unmarried. His home was in Hazlehurst, Pa.

TAFT RECOVERS; ATTENDS CHURCH

No Formal Reception Is Given Him at Sioux Falls.

Sioux Falls, N. D., June 16.—Secretary of War Taft arrived here from St. Paul at 8:30 this morning. He said he had entirely recovered from his indisposition. No formal reception was planned, but several hundred people called to pay their respects to the secretary. He attended church at 1 o'clock and left for Fort Meade with Senators Gamble and Kittredge and Governor Crawford.

WEAVING A NET ABOUT HAYWOOD

State Is Endeavoring to Corroborate Orchard's Story.

200 WITNESSES FOR DEFENSE

It Is Claimed That Many of These Witnesses Will Shatter the Bloody Recital of Orchard. Hearing Won't Be Resumed Till Tuesday.

Boise, Idaho, June 16.—While the trial of William D. Haywood, charged with conspiring to murder Former Governor Frank Steunenberg, stands adjourned till Tuesday, Harry Orchard, the chief witness in the case, tomorrow will be taken to Caldwell, where the case against him for the actual murder of Steunenberg will be called and postponed until the next term of court.

Judge Fremont Wood, who is presiding in the Haywood case, will hold court in Caldwell tomorrow, acting for Judge Bryan, who is disqualified in the Orchard case because his partner was counsel for Orchard at the time of his arrest. Orchard will be taken to Caldwell in charge of Warden Whitney, of the Idaho penitentiary and a force of guards. The adjournment of Orchard's case will take only a few minutes. The prisoner will at once be brought back to Boise.

Supporting Orchard's Story.

The Haywood trial will be resumed Tuesday morning, when the state will continue the introduction of evidence in support of Orchard's story and endeavor further to link the defendant with the conspiracy to murder Steunenberg as outlined by Orchard in his confession. So far the evidence has been corroborative of Orchard's story of his many crimes in major and minor detail. The direct connection of Haywood with the murder has yet to come out in evidence. Certain evidence has linked him with Adams, who, Orchard says, was his partner in a number of crimes.

Documentary evidence has shown Haywood's connection with Jack Simpkins, but as Simpkins was a member of the executive board of the Western wood is still the secretary and treaswood is still the secretary and ttreasurer, counsel for the defense assert that the drafts were drawn in the regular course of the federation business, and drafts from Haywood to Simpkins have no connection with a conspiracy, being, in fact, on the records of the federation.

Simpkins Not Yet Arrested.

Simpkins is named in the indictment with Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone, but he has not been arrested. One of the drafts in his favor was drawn after the murder of Steunenberg. The state has shown by witnesses that Simpkins was with Orchard in Caldwell prior to the murder. The last draft produced in evidence was identified by the cashier of the Denver bank and was drawn in January, 1906. It was indorsed by Simpkins' wife and paid to her by a bank in Spokane. Steunenberg was killed on December 30, 1905. The last draft in favor of Simpkins was drawn prior to the time Orchard made his confession, and about three weeks before Haywood was arrested in Denver. It is rumored that the whereabouts of Simpkins is known and that he will be produced as a witness at the proper time. Counsel for the defense and prosecution do not confirm the report.

It is probable that the direct case for the state will rest by the end of this week. Adams may be called to the stand, but this is not certain. A strong effort will be made to get Adams' repudiated confession before the jury.

Haywood's Attacks on Steunenberg.

On Tuesday the state will offer in evidence copies of certain printed articles over Haywood's signature showing the language used by the defendant against Steunenberg when the former governor was running for office. The decision of the supreme court of Colorado having to do with the eight hour bill, which Haywood was supporting, and which was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court when Judge Goddard was on the bench, will be offered in evidence. Orchard swore that he was employed to kill Judge Goddard and Judge Gabbert, of the supreme court, and that he did attempt to kill them.

Evience in further corroboration of Orchard's story of his attempts on the life of Fred Bradley, of San Francisco, is said to be forthcoming. The most essential part of this is copies of the telegrams which Orchard swore he received from "Pat Dowe" or Pettibone. These, he said, were received by him over the Postal Telegraph company, and several sums of money were sent to him while he remained in San Francisco waiting an opportunity to kill Bradley.

Many Witnesses for Defense.

The defense has announced that it will have between one hundred and fifty and two hundred witnesses. Subpoenas have not been asked for these, and it is probable that they will voluntarily testify for Haywood. This seems almost certain from the questions asked the state's witnesses to show that they were brought to Boise on subpoenas, in most instances served by Pinkertons, and that many of them got advance money from the Pinkerton officers. The defense's witnesses, it is said, will contradict Orchard as to the whereabouts of Haywood or Moyer or Pettibone, and even of Orchard himself.

Both sides were busy today in preparing for the continuance of the struggle. Haywood was visited at the court house by his relatives and counsel. Orchard was brought from the prison to Mr. Hawley's office during the afternoon.

For some time he was in consultation. Orchard may go on the stand again this week.

JAPAN WILL GET FRENCH MONEY

In Return Gives France Guarantee for Indo-China.

FRANCE INSURED IN ORIENT

And French Statesmen Consider the Insurance Cheap—France Has Braved the Wrath of Russia by a Deal With Japan.

Paris, June 16.—While political considerations of a high order contributed to the negotiation of the new Franco-Japanese ente, there is no longer any doubt that the substantial quid pro quo given by France was the promise of access to the French market for future Japanese loans. Japan did not need a French guarantee for Korea and Formosa, but a Japanese guarantee for Indo-China was worth a great deal to France and she was willing to pay the price demanded.

Japan, according to the confidential statements made by some of her foremost representatives in Europe, will need five billion francs, with the new years to convert her present high rate loans and to furnish the capital necessary for industrial and commercial development planned in Manchuria and London. While the money markets of the world are unfavavorable to flotations, Japan has succeeded in insuring the assent of the French government to the placing of her loans here when the opportune time arrives.

Japan Feared by France.

It is regarded as a big achievement for Japan, but the French government is equally convinced that it is a good bargain for France. The dread of Japanese aggression in Indo-China has for years haunted the Quai d'Orsay, which has in its archives proofs that at one time a plan of campaign against the French colony of Indo-China has been prepared at Tokio. Subsequent events, however, decided Japan to strike Russia instead of France. France was party to the agreement which forced Japan to relinquish the fruits of her victory over China.

There was a critical moment during the Fashoda incident when France and England seemed on the verge of war. France was then greatly alarmed lest Japan would seize the opportunity and strike, and hurried preparations were made to defend the Chinese colony. There was another crisis in the relations between France and Japan during the Russo-Japanese war when France stretched her neutrality to the limit in favor of her ally by allowing Rojestvensky's fleet shelter of weeks in Cameron bay.

Braved Wrath of Russia.

After peace was made by the treaty of Portsmouth and Japan entered the market for a 500,000,000 yen loan, M. Rouvier, then minister of finance, deliberately braved the dissatisfaction of Russia by insisting on the admission of part of the loan to the Paris bourse, declaring substantially:

"We must think of France first. It is cheap insurance for Indo-China."

M. Pichon was possessed by the same idea when M. Kurino, the Japanese ambassador, approached him last winter relative to the latest Japanese 500,000,000 francs issue. He wanted to know if Japan was prepared to give a written promise guaranteeing Indo-China. M. Kurino replied that Japan had absolutely no aggressive intentions and offered to consult his government. That conversation was the germ of the negotiations which have resulted in the convention just concluded.

GREAT MEETING FOR TEMPERANCE

Five Thousand People Gather at Cartersville Rally.

MEETING LASTED ALL DAY

Dr. and Mrs. Felton, Judge Akin, Judge Roddenberry and Judge Fite Among Speakers at the Great Temperance Rally at Cartersville Sunday.

Cartersville, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—One of the most remarkable temperance gatherings ever witnessed in Bartow county was held today in the Sam Jones tabernacle at this place.

Five thousand of the representative citizens of the county were present to hear addresses delivered by Judge S. A. Roddenberry, of Thomasville; Judge John W. Akin, senator-elect, of Cartersville; Judge A. W. Fite, of Cartersville; Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Felton, of aBrtow county.

The meeting was called by the ladies of the local W. C. T. U., and lasted all day, many of the people from the country bringing dinner and spending the day under the roof of the tabernacle.

Judge Roddenberry spoke at 11 o'clock a. m. and at 3 p. m. At both hours his addresses were of wonderful power, and thrilled his hearers with enthusiasm.

In the afternoon, Judge Akin, Judge Fite, and Mrs. Felton addressed the great audience, and when it was announced that Dr. William H. Felton, "the grand old man of Bartow," would speak, the audience greeted the announcement with a great burst of applause.

Sitting in a comfortable rocking chair, the trembling old man was brought before the people, when he thrilled them as in the days of his youth and vigor with his eloquence.

ALL THIS WEEK IN TESTIMONY

160 STILL TO BE EXAMINED

Hearing in the Shipp Case Will Be Resumed This Morning—One of the Alleged Lynchers Will Take the Stand Today.

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 16.—When the Shipp hearing is resumed tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, William Marquette, who is alleged to have been one of the lynchers at the county jail March 19, 1905, will take the witness stand and tell of his movements that night. It is believed that almost the entire day will be devoted to finishing the Marquette case and hearing the evidence in the Padgett and Hayes cases.

Attorneys for the defendants stated today that in their opinion the entire week would be occupied in taking testimony. There are yet nearly 160 witnesses to be examined, and, hearing twenty each day, it would require five days to complete the defense.

ASA CANDLER ADDS $25,000 TO HIS GIFT

SCENE OF ENTHUSIASM AT THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF CANDLER'S OFFER

Col. George Winship, of First Methodist Church, Contributed $12,000 to the Enterprise—Rev. Frank Eakes Outlines Scope of Work to Be Done by the Institution.

BELIEVES ENTIRE FUND WILL TOTAL $300,000.

Speaking of the sum raised for Wesley Memorial enterprises yesterday, R. J. Guinn, chairman of the central committee, said:

"There are less than fifteen thousand Methodists, old and young in Atlanta district. A tax levy of such an enormous sum on any municipality of 15,000 population on the continent would call forth a storm of protests. There is no explanation to such an unprecedented voluntary offering except that found in the unseen power of the Risen Lord.

"I confidently believe that the completed canvass in Atlanta alone will reach the magnificent sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Many of our ablest people were out of the city today. Still others have not announced their subscriptions. Hundreds of smaller contributors have as yet had no opportunity for giving, and the published lists will show the importance in a movement like this of the small contributor.

"When the accurate canvass planned for the city and state is finished it will not surprise us if the total figure passes the three hundred thousand dollar mark.

"Today's results seem to emphasize the value and strength of united effort; and the credit for a great day's work is equally shown by the most forceful bishop and the humblest worker."

By EDWARD YOUNG CLARKE.

Just to show what they could do for the cause of Christ and humanity, and to demonstrate their willingness to pour out their money liberally where the cause was worthy, the Methodist Episcopal churches of Atlanta yesterday went on record as donating $201,000 towards the erecting of the great Wesley Memorial Institutional church. Of this amount, Asa G. Candler gave $75,000.

When it was announced at the meeting yesterday afternoon at Wesley Memorial tabernacle that the $200,000 mark had been reached, prolonged cheering and applause followed.

It was Methodism's crowning day.

The height of the enthusiasm was reached when it was announced that Asa G. Candler, who had offered $50,000 on condition that $150,000 additional could be raised, had decided to increase his subscription to $75,000. This announcement for a moment seemed to stagger the audience, and a deathly stillness swept over it, while some one shouted, "Do you mean it?" and Bishop Galloway and Mr. Candler replied, "Yes we do."

This was more than the crowd could stand, and cheering, laughing, weeping and clapping mixed in one roaring medley, which ended by all singing "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow."

MANY BIG SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE WESLEY MEMORIAL

Besides the notable gift of Asa G. Candler, a number of striking and notable gifts were made. For instance, Wesley Memorial church gave something like $12,000; First Methidist church gave $36,000; Park Street Methodist gave something like $10,000; Walker Street Methodist, $5,000; Col. Geo. Winship, of First Methodist, gave $12,000.

There were also some remarkable donations from the small churches around Atlanta. Some of the little suburban churches gave as high as $1,500.

On all sides was evidence of the fact that never before in the history of the Methodist church has there been such an arousing of the Methodist hosts and the focusing of their united effort into one particular channel.

Bishop Ward presided over the meeting, and on all sides were heard most commendatory words regarding the ease with which he handled the entire matter.

DR. BROUGHTON GIVEN SEAT ON THE PLATFORM

The Wesley Memorial tabernacle, which seats 2,000 people, was packed long before the time for the meeting to open arrived, and thousands were turned away. Just as the meeting was opening, Dr. Len G. Broughton arrived and was shown immediately to the platform, where he was an interested and sympathetic onlooker.

Having just passed through a successful campaign and having raised for his own work over $150,000, he was in position to know how keenly anxious were all present to see the subscription reach the desired sum on this day.

In the audience were people of all classes and sects, and Presbyterians and Baptists gave freely to the movement when subscriptions were called for, one member from the Baptist tabernacle giving $100.

FRANK EAKES OUTLINES WORK OF ENTERPRISES

Now that the $200,000 is raised, it is uppermost in all minds as to exactly what use will be made of the money. When seen and asked for an outline as to the first work to be done and the final culmination of the work, Rev. Frank Eakes, the pastor of the Wesley Memorial church and head of the Wesley hospital said:

"The first step to be taken will be the breaking of ground for the new church building on the site of the present temporary tabernacle. We will erect an auditorium ample to seat the people, and will have an edifice that will be a pride to Methodists and to Atlanta.

"We will also proceed to the enlargement of the Wesley hospital, and as soon as practicable will go to work on the dormitories. The first step will, however, be the erection of the new church building."

The general outline of the plans calls for a magnificent church edifice, with all kinds of departments in the building for the various classes of work the institution will perform for the uplift of humanity.

There will be dormitories for men and women, similar to those operated by the Baptist tabernacle, though on somewhat different plans. There will be beds for persons to sleep who are temporarily homeless and adrift.

A rool garden will be the delight of the neighborhood, and a gymnasium will make things attractive to the men so inclined.

The hospital will be doubled in capacity and will afford a haven of hope and rest for the sick and afflicted, whether they have money or not, and regardless of their denominational affiliations.

GIFT TO THE FUND MADE BY CHAIRMAN

One of the most unique gifts made during the entire time was that of a Chinaman recently converted and baptized at Park Street Methodist church. He gave twenty-five dollars, and said he wished that he had more to give.

Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald in a beautiful letter inclosed a check for $100.

LEAGUE CLOSES ITS CONVENTION

Sixth Annual Convention Was Finished Yesterday.

SESSION GREATLY ENJOYED

Miss Mabel Head Gave Splendid Discussion Yesterday at Session of the South Georgia Epworth League—Work Given New Impetus by the Convention.

Macon, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—The sixth annual convention of the Epworth League of the South Georgia conference came to an end this evening after four days of busy, profitable and pleasant work. The business of the league was completed last night and today was spent in worship and good fellowship. The discussion at 8:30 o'clock this morning on "A Vision of the Home Field," by Miss Mabel Head, was one of the best discussions heard during the sessions of the conference. In her discussion, Miss Head took a very broad point of view. She spoke of America as home, and not Georgia. Her discussion was characterized by an earnestness and depth of feeling that compelled the attention and interest of all who were attending the service. At 11 o'clock, Dr. Edward F. Cook preached the conference sermon to the largest audience that has yet attended any session of the league. Dr. Cook's sermon is spoken of as one of the best preached in Macon for a long time. The closing session of the league was well attended, and the discussions of "Our Vision," "Our Desire" and "Our Purpose" were listened to with great interest.

The two hundred delegates who have attended the league have enjoyed their visit to the Central City. Their fellow workers here have welcomed them, and have given every possible help to the work. That the work of the Epworth League in Georgia, and especially in south Georgia, has received a new impetus and enthusiasm there can be no doubt.

Wood Attempts Suicide.

Macon, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—The friends of George Wood, a resident of Macon, who has been taking treatment for several weeks at Dr. Allen's sanitarium, Milledgeville, will regret to learn of the suicidal attempt of Mr. Wood yesterday morning. Mr. Wood has not been in good spirits for several days, though it was not thought that he was so dejected as to lead to anything so serious. The attempt was made with a pistol, two shots being fired. One ball struck and shattered his collar bone, while the other went half an inch above his heart. There is some hope of his recovery.

Delegation to Go From Macon.

Macon, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—At the annual convention of the state federation of labor which meets at Savannah next Wednesday, Macon will be represented by Messrs. W. A. Goodyear, Luke Jones, R. E. Casson and E. B. Glendonwill. It is certain that these will go, and probable that other prominent citizens will also be in Macon's delegation. An effort will be made to bring the convention next year to Macon, and there seems to be no good reason why the effort should not be successful.

Odd Fellows Help Home.

Macon, Ga., June 16.—(Special)—A large number of the members of Lodge, No. 265, Odd Fellows, visited the Georgia Industrial home yesterday afternoon with a view of ascertaining just in what particular the home most needs their assistance. It was found that the most pressing demand is for $5,000 with which to complete Mumford memorial hall, which is being erected in honor of the founder of the home, and which is as yet far from completion. Every member of the party attending the home yesterday carried some gift for the pleasure and delight of the children. There are at present about one hundred children in the home. It is thought that there will be some telling results from the visit of yesterday. In fact, it was stated by Noble Grand J. T. Rodgers, after his return from the home, that the only thing needed to get people to give to that worthy institution was a visit to see something of its noble work. E. J. Willingham, president of the board of directors states that he is meeting with encouragement in the work, and that plans for better equipment are progressing as fast as might be expected.

Busy Week for City Court.

Macon, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—The city court will begin its third week in the civil branch tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Thirty cases have been set for the week and some are of considerable importance. All the business of the court cannot be wound up in these six days, but it is not known whether Judge Hodges will continue the proceedings further.

Macon Wins Golf Contest.

Macon, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—Professor G. W. Macon, who has just returned from the recent golf meet in Atlanta, and who is one of the best golf players in the state, was one of the entries in a driving match which took place on the Log Cabin links yesterday afternoon, and was the winner in the contest. Professor Macon is a good all-round athlete, and at golf he has few superiors to be found anywhere.

FALL FROM HISTORIC TREE CAUSES DEATH OF JOHNSON

OAXACA, Mexico, June 16.—After a meteoric career in Mexico as the manager of large agricultural interests belonging to an American syndicate, J. W. Johnson, of New York, died a very remarkable death near here yesterday, falling from among the branches of the famous "Arbol Del Tule," a great tree, said to be the largest in North America, and located near this city.

The authorities are of the opinion that Johnson's death was suicidal. The tree of Tule is an enormous growth, and witnesses state that Johnson fell from branches fifty meters above the ground.

Johnson came to this city direct from New York City some months ago, and took over the position of general manager of the syndicate whose properties are situated in the Isthmus of Tehuantepec.

SOLDIERS KEEP RUSSIA QUIET

o fthe second duma failed to justify our expectations. It was not with the will or desire to strengthen Russia and perfect her new administration that many of the delegates of the nation set to work, but with a manifest tendency to augment her troubles and assist in the disruption of the state.

"As a consequence of this activity during these periods of the duma, which constituted insurmountable obstacles to fruitful labor, a hostile spirit was introduced into the duma itself, which prevented the union of a sufficient number of its members desirous of working for the interests of the country. For this reason, the dumo either failed to discuss important measures that were drawn up by the government or delayed their discussion, or else rejected them, not even recoiling from the rejection of laws which punished the open support of crimes and particularly the disseminators of trouble, having evaded condemnation for assassinations and acts of violence.

Epoch of Crime and Disaster.

"The duma did not lend its moral support to the government in the restriction of order, and Russia continues to suffer the shame of an epoch of crime and disasters.

"The examination of the budget created an obstacle to the timely satisfaction of many of the vital needs of the people. The right of interpellation was transformed by a considerable party in the duma, into a means of fighting against the government and exciting distrust towards it among large classes of people.

"Lastly, an act was committed unheard of in the annals of history. The judicial authorities discovered a plot by members of the duma against the state and power czar, and when our government demanded the exclusion until judgment had been passed of fifty-five members of the dumo implicated in the crime, and the arrest of those among them most compromised, the duma failed to carry out immediately the lawful demand of the authorities, which admitted of no delay.

"All this compelled us by ukase to the senate to dissolve the second duma, fixing September 14 as the date of the convocation of the new duma, believing, however, in the patriotism and national spirit of our people.

"We find the cause of failure on two occasions of activity in the duma, in the fact that owing to the work and imperfection of the electoral law, the legislative institution was composed of members who were not only truly representatives of the needs and desires of the people; consequently, while leaving in force all the rights granted to our subjects by the manifesto of October 30, 1906, and the fundamental laws, we have decided to modify the procedure in choosing elective representatives of the people by the duma, in order that each section of the people may have its own representatives.

Duma Should Be Russian.

"The duma was summoned to strengthen the Russian state, and ought to be Russian in spirit. Other nationalities forming part of our empire ought to have representatives of their needs in the duma, but they ought not to appear, and shall not appear, in such number as will make it possible for them to be arbitors on questions which are purely Russian.

"Within the confines of the state, where the people have not attained sufficient civic development, the elections to the duma must be temporarily suspended.

"All these electoral modifications could not have been introduced in the customary legislative way, by the duma, whose composition is recognized by us to be unsatisfactory, by reason by the imperfection of the proceedure for the elections of the members of the duma—it is only to the power which gave the first electoral law—the historic power of the czar—that the right of abrogating that law and replacing it by a new law belongs. God has given us the power of the czar over our people. It is before His throne, we shall answer for the destinies of the Russian state. Believing this, we have made a firm resolution to carry on to the very end the work begun by us for the reformation of Russia. We give Russia a new electoral law, and order its promulgation in the senate. From our faithful subjects we look for united and vigorous service in the direction indicated by us for the country whose sons have been, in all times, the firm support of its strength, its greatness and its glory.

DR. GAINES AT UNIVERSITY

President of Agnes Scott Delivers the Commencement Sermon.

Athens, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—The exercises at the University of Georgia chapel this morning were full of inspiration. Te music was splendid and the sermon was a plain, old-fashioned gospel talk that stirred the congregation to the very depths.

After singing doxology and the offering of prayer by Dr. F. H. Gaines, president of Agnes Scott Institute, the large congregation rose and sang "Coronation." Dr. Gaines read Scripture selections and offered prayer, after which the congregation sang "My Faith Looks Up to Thee."

Dr. Gaines announced as his text, John x:10: "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly."

Dr. Gaines said, in part:

"The subject of my sermon is 'The Largeness, the Fullness of the Christian Life.' It is true because it is a life saved from sin. Sin is a fact, a fearful, awful fact, a fact so stubbornly awful as to make the divine plan of redemption necessary to salvation, a fact so awful as to fill the world with darkness, crime, sorrow and death.

"Jesus saves from the guilt of sin. Guilt is a debt that the transgressor owes to the divine law. It has a penalty and that penalty is death. There is a deliverance from sin and from that penalty. Consider what it is to be under the ban of an earthly law. It binds and restricts a man. Only the man who has fulfilled the law has the largest opportunity and largest life in Georgia. It is not the man under the penalty of God's law, but the man who stands a free man, delivered from its curse, justified under all its promises, that has the larger life.

"The responsibility of choice is upon you. How much depends upon your choice of the kind of life you will lead, to yourself, to your home, to your state and to the world!"

After prayer by Dr. Gaines and the singing of the university hymn the benediction was pronounced.

Tonight at half past 8 o'clock, at the Presbyterian church, Dr. Ira Landrith addressed the university Young Men's Christian Association, and delivered a powerful sermon, which was listened to by a large congregation.

Tomorrow morning the sophomore declaration contest will take place, and tomorrow afternoon the representatives of the various branches of the University of Georgia will deliver orations at the chapel.

FATHER'S HOPE IS ABANDONED

No Clue of Whereabouts of Kidnaped Italian Boy.

LARGE SUM OF MONEY SPENT

No Threats of Violence Follow Attempt to Kidnap the Son of Police Captain Capo, in Charge of the Italian Quarter in New Orleans.

New Orleans, La., June 16.—Hope of finding the kidnaped Italian boy, Walter Lamana, was about given up today.

The trip of detectives to the Louisiana "lower coast" islands produced no trace whatever of the child. During the eight days' search which have elapsed since the kidnaping the boy's father has spent very nearly one-sixth of the $6,000 ransom money demanded in running down clews.

Special trains have been the biggest item in this expense.

No threats of violence have followed last night's daring attempt to kidnap a child of Police Captain Capo, in charge of the Italian quarter of New Orleans. Italian excitement appears to have subsided very much.

Last night about 11 o'clock Officers Barefield and Drennan brought into the police station James Holcomb and wife, colored, who were charged with the theft. The woman decided that it would be more expedient for her personal comfort to tell the truth, and told where the articles could be found. The owner is unknown.

Women's Diseases

Fully three-fourths of the ills of womankind are due to over-work and insufficiently nourished nerves.

As "virtue is the backbone of society," just so the nervous system is actually the backbone of our physical existence.

The head, heart, lungs, stomach, liver, kidneys, regenerative organs—practically every part of the human anatomy—is more or less dependent upon the nervous system.

For over twenty years we have given our entire time to curing the chronic and nervous troubles of men and women.

We are equipped for this work to an extent and at an expense uncalled for by the demands and practice of the ordinary physician.

We treat probably a hundred chronic and nervous cases where the average practitioner treats one.

If your disorder is one peculiar to your sex don't hesitate to call through a feeling of ill-advised "delicacy."

The matter is too important to neglect, and the attention you will receive here will be as confidential, as private, and more satisfactory than if a less experienced physician were to attend you in your own home.

You cannot possibly make a mistake in writing or calling to see us. There is no charge to you for this visit, and it does not place you under any obligations to us whatever.

Positions Have Already Been Secured by Every Member of the Graduating Class at Liberty to Accept an Offer.

ON next Thursday evening the curtain will be forever drawn on the college days of thirty-four young men who have been daily toiling through the long period of four and five years in the attempt to win from the Georgia School of Technology the honor of a degree. These years, for some, have been extremely trying, while for a few, blessed with a genius for their studies and an almost unlimited capacity for work in shops and laboratories, there have been a few pleasurable hours. From none, however, comes there a complaint that the work is administered in insufficient quantities to keep even the most studiously inclined busy.

No wonder it is that there will be happy smiles and beaming countenances among the graduates and hearty congratulations on every side from their friends, when the future engineers of the south's industrial greatness receive their diplomas from the hands of the president of the Georgia School of Technology on Thursday night.

One test of the efficiency of an institution may be had by a comparison of the numbers in a class upon entrance and the graduating number. The class of this year is one of the best in scholarship that the school has ever known, and it ranks high in numerical strength, but out of a total number of 150 who entered in the apprentice class, and this number augmented by 60 in the freshman class, making a total of 210, the number at graduation is reduced to only thirty-four.

A true compliment to their work as well as the value of technical training such as is given at the School of Technology, is shown by the fact that every member of the class has accepted a position that would take one.

Personnel of Class.

A brief sketch of each member of the class will be of interest.

Robert Moore Angas entered Tech as a member of the freshman class of 1903-04. He will receive the degree of bachelor of science and mechanical engineering. Mr. Angas is a Jacksonville, Fla., boy.

John Joseph Apple is a member of the electrical engineering section and a graduate of the Savannah high school. He entered the freshman class and will accept a position with the Westinghouse Electric Company at Pittsburg, Pa.

Lewis Rhodes Jackson, of Monroe, Ga., was one of the brightest men in his class. He will gt a dgree in mchanical engineering. He has been prominent in college activities, and will take a position as adjunct professor of drawing at Tech next year.

Walter Howard Johnson, of Chattahoochee county, entered freshman, and will receive the degree of bachelor of science in mechanical enginering.

Ernest Bodham Kenner, of Dalton, entered the apprentice class. He is a member of the mechanical engineering section.

Aaron Collins Knight, of Cartersville, Ga., entered the apprentice class, and will be a civil engineer. He has played as outfielder and catcher on the baseball team of Tech for several years. He was for two years catcher on the 'varsity baseball team.

Hugh Hiram Leech, of Nebraska, entered the sophomore class in 1904, and will graduate in mechanical engineering.

Berryman Thomas Longino, of Fairburn, Ga., will graduate in electrical engineering, and will take a position with Stone & Webster, of Boston.

Olin Harrington Longino, of Atlanta, entered the freshman class after graduating from the Boys' High school. He will be an electrical engineer, and will go with the Westinghouse Electric Company, of Pittsburg.

Lester Bradwell Mann, of Telfair county, entered the apprentice class in 1902, in the civil engineering section. He was president of the athletic association, and also served as president of the senior class. He was elected local editor of "The Georgia Tech."

Theodore Wickhart Raht, of Chattanooga, a member of the texile engineering section, was manager of the 1905 baseball team.

Robert A. Riley, of Atlanta, a graduate of the Boys' High school, will graduate from Tech in an electrical engineering course, and will go with the General Electric Company, of Schenectady. He was class secretary and member of the class baseball team.

John Earnest Sims, of Atlanta, graduated from Peacock's school. He will graduate in electrical engineering. He will take a position with the General Electric Company.

Andrew Horace Sparks, of Sandersville, Ga., will receive the degree in electrical engineering. He will accept a position in Cincinnati with the Ollis Chalmers Electric Company.

Gilbert Morris Stout, of Cumberland City, Tenn., is an electrical engineer, and after graduation will go to Pittsburg with the Westinghouse Company. He was manager of the basket ball team, and played on the class baseball team.

Charles Norris Thornton, of Atlanta, entered the apprentice class. He will receive a degree as an electrical engineer. He played on the class baseball team.

John Moore Trapnell, of Bulloch county, is a member of the mechanical engineering section. He serves as treasurer of his class.

Arnold Willatowski, of Atlanta, entered freshman. He will receive the degree of bachelor of science in electrical engineering. He will go with the General Electric Company.

William Elliott Wood, of Aiken, S. C., entered freshman, and will graduate in the electrical engineering course. After graduation he will go with Stone & Webster, of Boston.

Wrong Food Makes Invalids

Little Quirks and Ails are Nature's Mild Requests to Right Some Wrong

One must Heed the Complaint or Pay the Penalty

Modern folks have discovered a way to recover—by proper selection of food and drink.

Look carefully into the health of the individual who knows that "coffee don't hurt me" and you are almost sure to find some physical ail or functional disturbances—perhaps muddy complexion, weak eyes, incipient heart failure; kidney, liver or bowel disorders; or some form of weakness that shows plainly enough the cry for relief sent up from some organ of the body.

Dismissal of coffee and change to Postum brings relief and shows clearly that coffee hinders digestion. Failure in digestion means lack of good red blood and therefore a lack of food for the nerve centers. Removal of the cause will allow Nature to right herself, and Postum contains Phosphate of Potash, Albumen, etc., from the field grains which unite to form the delicate gray matter of the nerves throughout the body.

Long-boiling (see directions on package) brings out the rich flavor and snappy coffee taste—free from the nerve-racking drug—caffeine—in coffee.

Splendid Program Has Been Arranged by Tech for Commencement Season—Business Session of Alumni Association on Tuesday Afternoon.

The commencement exercises of the Georgia School of Technology were opened on Saturday afternoon when a large number of the Atlanta patrons of the school witnessed a social-athletic baseball game between the faculty and the seniors of the college. SISTER OF MRS. HOWARD GOULD BECOMES SUBJECT OF CHINA

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Mrs. Wong Sun Yue, sister of Mrs. Howard Gould, is no longer an American citizen. She voluntarily relinquished her rights as a native-born Californian yesterday to become as much as possible an all-around Chinese, like her husband. The records of the local Chinese bureau are lacking in cases similar to that of Mrs. Wong Sun Yue. She will be subject to the laws of China when she chooses to visit that country and when she comes home she will be subjected to the regulations of the immigration and restriction laws. Mrs. Yue, who renounced her citizenship to become a Chinese merchant, said:

"In becoming a Chinese merchant many paths are open to me which were closed before. I have been a member of a tailoring firm called the Quong Yuen Yick. It's the dragon for me, instead of the stars and stripes."

QUILLIAN IS IN FAVOR OF MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

ALDERMAN QUILLIAN is in favor of the city acquiring the North Georgia Electric Company. He threw out this suggestion to the members of the special electric light committee Saturday afternoon.

This acquisition, if sought to be put in effect, would have to be deferred for three or four years now, as the five years' lighting contract with the Georgia Railway and Electric Company has been agreed upon by the committee.

Of course, the council can turn down the report of its committee, but that is hardly probable. However, such a thing might happen if the municipal ownership idea should be revived, which is a very remote possibility—for this year at least.

The plan to acquire the North Georgia company, or to prepare in some other way for the city to own its own municipal lighting plant, may be set in operation far enough in advance to have everything in readiness to make the change when the five-year contract expires.

Alderman Key suggested that it would be essential to have a water power in order to compete with the Georgia Railway and Electric Company.

Councilman Terrell thought the Georgia Railway and Electric Company should be taken along, too, lock, stock and barrel, but that it would require more money than the city could raise.

CITY COUNCIL TO MEET TODAY

Several Important Matters Will Come Up for Action.

The city council will meet this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The ordinance committee will not be ready to report the ordinance providing for the limiting of all franchises by the city in the future, but such an ordinance will be prepared and reported to a subsequent meeting of the council, said Councilman Terrell last night.

While this matter came up over the telephone franchises, the sense of the body seems to be to make it apply in the case of all franchises granted in the future.

At the last meeting of the council Councilman Mangum wanted to know what had become of his resolution regarding the working of county convicts within the city limits, which action he urged upon the ground that the city paid 90 per cent of the county taxes and ought to get that share of the work. It is likely he will bring this matter up again this afternoon.

If the police committee finishes its report on the granting of whisky licenses this morning, this report will likely go to the council this afternoon and be acted on. The licenses expire at 12 o'clock midnight June 30.

The sub-committee from the committee of the whole, consisting of Hirsch, Hartman and Pearce, will report to the committee of the whole in the Stocks matter, which in turn will report to the body for such action as it sees fit.

As the sub-committee will report that Water Commissioner Thomas F. Stocks was only an employee of the Stocks Coal company, and therefore had no interest in any alleged rebates paid that company by the Ragland Coal company on coal sales to the water department, it is a pretty safe forecast that the council will dismiss these charges and Commissioner Stocks will be fully exonerated.

PUBLIC LANDS CONVENTION.

Delegates Are Arriving for Meeting in Denver.

Denver, Colo., June 16.—Delegates to the public lands convention will assemble in Denver this week. Four announced candidates are in the field for permanent chairman. They are Senator Thomas Carter, of Montana; Lieutenant Governor Harper, of Colorado; Dr. J. N. Wilson, of Wyoming, and Frank C. Goudy, of Colorado. One of the features of the gathering will be the big chamber of commerce banquet, which has been arranged for Wednesday evening. Secretary Garfield, of the department of the interior, will speak on "The West—Its Obligation," and Secretary Wilson, of the department of agriculture, on "The West—Its Right"; Governor France, of Oklahoma, on "The West—Its Accomplishments," and Senator Carter on "The West—Its Possibilities."

BREATHITT CASE CALLED TODAY

Three Men Are Charged With Murder at Jackson.

Lexington, Ky., June 16.—The case of B. Fulton French, John Smith, and John Abner, charged with complicity in the assassination of James B. Marcum, at Jackson, Breathitt county, will be called at Beattyville, Lee county, tomorrow at a special term of the Lee circuit court.

Judge John L. Dorsey, of Henderson, will preside. Witnesses from Perry, Breathitt and other counties will attend the trial.

It is understood Abner and Smith will ask separate trials from French and that the commonwealth will not object. W. O. Young, who is chief counsel for the Hargises, will represent French.

Mexico Said to Intend Increasing Her Navy Materially.

Mexico City, June 16.—Rumors are current here to the effect that the Mexican government is negotiating for two men of war transports and two new battleships. One of these transports, it is said, will be built in English ship yards and one in New Orleans. Negotiations are said to be in progress with an European power for the purchase of two new war ships which were recently launched and can be delivered at once. A semi-official denial of the truth of the rumors has been made.

Mother and Daughter Cremated in Fire at Savannah.

MAN WAS INJURED BY FALL

Mrs. Cook and Miss Fountain, Her Daughter, Burned to Death in Savannah Fire—The Young Lady's Modesty Caused Her to Lose Life.

Savannah, Ga., June 16.—Mrs. Thomas Cook and her daughter, Miss Estelle Fountain, were burned to death this morning at 2 o'clock in a fire that destroyed the home of N. A. Fountain, a son of Mrs. Cook. Mr. Fountain was injured by a fall from an upper story window, but will probably recover.

The house was located beyond the city limits, and the firemen did not go to render assistance. The flames had gained great headway when the occupants of the house was aroused.

Miss Fountain, it is said, had made her way from the house. Her modesty then forced her to run back for more clothing. She never reappeared.

Fountain was groping his way through the smoke when he fell through the window.

FACE CRISIS REGARDING FUEL.

American Miners in Mexico Are Unable to Move Their Ore.

Torreon, Mex., June 16.—Willard S. Morse, one of the high officials of the American Smelting and Refining company, stated yesterday that mining and smelting centers in Mexico are facing a crisis in the matter of fuel and ore transportation. This is particularly true at such points as are dependent upon the Mexican Central railroad. Mr. Morse states that the American Smelting and Refining company has at the present time over sixty thousand tons of ore and about 35,000 tons of fuel tied up with no prospect of being able to have them moved.

Among the worst sufferers are the mine owners, who are unable to send their product to the smelters and turn their money over for the purpose of meeting new expenses. This condition of affairs, in the opinion of Mr. Morse, has already worked great hardship to mining as well as smelting interests, and unless a remedy is speedily applied, he believes disastrous results will ensue.

PRACTICAL METHODISM.

Atlanta witnessed yesterday a remarkable demonstration of practical Methodism—but another synonym for practical Christianity—which gave evidence that the church is builded, not upon the bricks and mortar and stone beneath its edifices, but firmly, lastingly, ineffaceably in the hearts of its people.

Here were assembled for the first time in the history of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, all of its bishops, responding to a common call—that of erecting in honor of the founder of Methodism memorials destined to play no small part in the future history of the church with which the name of Wesley is indissolubly linked; whose living memory will ever be co-existent with the life of the church itself.

No more notable event has transpired in the religious history of Georgia, and that Atlanta should have been selected not only as the scene of these efforts, but as the site of the great Wesley Memorials, is sufficient to stir the pride of her citizenry and that of the great state of which she is the capital. The memorial to Wesley, established here, becomes a tribute to the moral, the religious growth and development of city and state, an institutional work of magnitude and importance which not Methodism alone, but all the people, should welcome, foster and encourage.

In the great Methodist churches of Atlanta were gathered yesterday congregations which taxed their capacity. If there was a true Methodist in the city who did not attend one of these spiritually stimulating services, it was because he was physically unable to get there; and the magnitude of the work and its import for the future attracted many members of the church from other points in the state, as well as not a few whose allegiance belongs to other denominations, but who could not forbear to respond to so worthy a call.

"This project must succeed, whatever else may fail," is the spirit with which men of strength and influence like Asa G. Candler, of Atlanta, and others of similar energy and determination have entereu upon the plan to build in memory of Methodism's founder and to the end of disseminating its Christian propaganda, not only a great auditorium and church, but other institutional structures such as hospital, nurses' home, home for young women, another for young men, reading rooms, editorial offices of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, gymnasium and baths, entertainment hall, all healthy and effective adjuncts of modern religious and Christian denominational movements.

The responses at yesterday's services, wide and general as they were, aggregating the splendid total of $201,450.28, showed that the heart of Methodism is in this work. In this great enterprise the humblest church member was given opportunity to feel a proprietary interest. The widow's mite was received with no less joy, with no less commendation of motive and spirit, than were the thousands given by the man of wealth. It was the spirit of the giving that counted, not the amount given.

And so it is the Wesley Memorial enterprises are to be founded by the Methodists of the south, not by a few members of the church of superior ability to give, even though they might be willing to give all and more than was needed. It is a principle of the church that each one shall contribute in accordance with his ability to the glory of God and the good of all; and therein each one and all are bound to the church by ties which strengthen and make for the greater success of its Christian mission.

Gratifying indeed was the result of these services, but the work will not stop here. It is proposed to push on and place before every Methodist in the south the opportunity of sharing in this epochal enterprise. The work of the seven bishops in Atlanta was but a beginning of the efforts which are yet ahead—the foundations, as it were, of one of the greatest and most significant church movements the south has yet witnessed.

"His Friends."

International students of economics and of sociological problems are devoting a great deal of attention nowadays to the relations between capital and labor, or, more specifically, between employer and employee. The age is essentially one of far-reaching adjustments of strange and complex conditions, and none are more baffling or more prolific in equal possibilities of good and evil than those whhich have to do with the ancient classification of "master and man."

Just how the employer should treat the man in his service, how much of a return the later should make for his set pay, what part he should play in determining the policies of that business, to what extent the persoanl element should enter into the relations between the man at the head and the men in the ranks, are questions the answers to which must sooner or later exert a considerable influence over the material destinies of the nation.

An illuminating story is told, in this connection, involving a typical American employer and his more than two hundred employees. The man had, himself, risen from the ranks and attained wealth. A little past his prime and after he had accumulated a large fortune, he married a woman much younger than himself, who at once developed a devotion to society and display approaching almost a mania. Charming, magnetic, intelligent and with that gift for entertaining which seems innate in some women, she speedily odminated a set which absolutely controlled the society of the city in which she lived.

Meanwhile, her husband, stinting none of her wants, had gone along his democratic, prosaic way, adding to his fortune, building still higher his business and leaving his ambitious wife largely to her endless pursuit of social distinction.

It chanced that he developed the typical rich man's fad to construct a mansion which, in its architectural and interior appointment, should overshadow anything of its kind in the vicinity. When the building was completed, the question of the conventional "hosue-warming" was uppermost. The fashionable wife planned, with great enthusiasm, an elaborate reception, at which all the socially elect of the town should be present.

The husband, usually complacent to her slightest whim, balked on this occasion. "The people," he reasoned, "who helped to build my fortune, and who made possible this extravagant house, are—my friends. The housewarming will be a reception to these two hundred and more men and women whose labor has laid the foundation for your luxuries and your social success, as well as my commercial prominence."

The aristocratic wife did not take kindly to the notion. For two years she combated it with all the arguments and wiles of which she was mistress, and the hosue-awrming, with various pretexts to an expectant and bewildered public, was strangely deferred from month to month.

Finally, the obstinate husband and loyal emipoyer won his contention. The house was thrown open with a [illegible] to his army of "friends," the men and women whose labor had made the fortune of himself and his wife.

The moral is obvious. It is in the promotion of close personal relations between employer and employee, the realization, on part of the former, that the latter is much more than part of a machine, the appreciation of a mutual obligation, that the solution of many of our more perplexing "master and man" problems can be found.

A Freak Year.

From current indications it would appear that the scriptural prophecy regarding the end of all things being ushered in by disasters unprecedented was on the verge of fulfillment.

The Chicago Tribune, a paper with a mania for collecting grotesque and oftentimes interesting statistics, publishes the following astonishing record of the year so far as it has developed:

Though the first half of 1907 has not passed, its record of casualty already exceeds the total of 1906. There have been thirty-eight railroad accidents of more than the ordinary magnitude, in which 273 persons have been killed and 926 injured.

Twenty-three steamers have been wrecked, involving the loss of 902 lives.

There have been thirteen mine accidents in which 355 persons have perished.

These casualties have been due to human negligence or ignorance in large part, but nature has been destructive also. Tidal waves have swept away 2,240, earthquakes 5,100, hurricanes 530, but cyclones thus far have been comparatively merciful, unless there shall prove to have been great loss of life by the one at Kurrachi, India, last week. In other cyclones about seventy have been killed.

When to these totals is added the sum of smaller casualties there can be little doubt that 1907 will be known in history as the year of disaster.

The cloud has a silver lining, however. The total of gifts and bequests in all forms of philanthropy in less than six months of 1907 is larger than the total for the twelve months of 1906, being $108,961,589, as compared with $106,281,083. And never have there been five months during the last twenty-five years in which the total of embezzlement and various forms of defalcation has been as small as in this first five months of 1907.

As The Tribune comments, many of these disasters were of the avoidable nature and may be traced to the negligence into which the transportation systems have drifted, as an inevitable result of their hot pursuit of high dividends. Remedial measures in this direction are already under way, and we may confidently look for a lowering of this portion of the record in the future.

As to nature's share in the giant game in which humanity is the involuntary pawn, we may only smile up into the face of the inscrutable old lady and pray humbly that she make her future sport less rough, bloody and expensive.

The philanthropic benefaction which the first few months have brought remind us, strangely, of the sometimes obscure operations of the law of compensation, at which the ultra-practical man is more or less wont to mock.

We may legitimately express the hope that the chapters which the old man with the scythe and the hour-glass has written for the completing months of the year will bring the balance on the big end of the ledger still more decisively on the side of good words and prosperous events, whether of nature or the human atom.

And there is definite consolation in the fact that, for the time being, the bank-wreckers and others who are disciples of their peculiar predatory methods, have shown a beautifully lessening activity.

Misunderstood Russia.

Ethan Allen Hitchcock, former secretary of the interior, is probably correct when he declares that Russia is the most misunderstood country in the world, at least as far as the people of America are concerned.

Mr. Hitchcock, in an interview in The Washington Post, says, in part:

For instance, it is not generally understood here that the czar is doing all he can to aid the people of his country, standing between them and the aristocracy, land barons and bureaucracy. The present government in Russia is trying to solve the problems in the country in accordance with the policy of the czar.

Mr. Hitchcock might safely have gone farther and attributed lack of understanding of Russia to the majority of the civilized countries, since it is tolerably evident that America has no monopoly in this respect.

The growth of uncertainty, misgiving and lack of sympathy between Russia and the outside world may largely be traced to the traditional attitude of the ruling powers of that country. From the time that history has recorded the progress and the doings of the empire, as such, the tale of blood and oppression and tyranny in its many forms has been mitigated only occasionally, by the rule of some benign sovereign large enough of mind and heart to strive in good faith for the furtherance of his people's welfare.

Russian officialdom has, too, connived at the popular conception by obstinately throwing a veil of mystery about all things transpiring in that country. Press reports, until of late date, have invariably been censored, and the public and private conduct of the empire's diplomatic representatives abroad has not been such as to remove the impression of reticence and undesirable procedure.

The thinking portion of civilization is inclined to impute good motives to Nicholas, the reigning czar. It knows, at the same time, that he is pitiably inadequate for the delicate mission of reading the minds of his people, and that he is vacillating in the policies of reform dictated by his naturally good heart.

An enthusiastic advocate of the public weal and popular rule one day, it has been shown that on the next he may, through the influence of the sinister reactionary element, retrograde into the most stubborn and unyielding of autocrats, performing deeds and giving voice to expressions calculated to nullify the progress previously marked to his credit.

So it will be seen that the universal misunderstanding of Russia may be laid to the blame of Russia itself. The American people are essentially in sympathy with the masses in their struggle for freedom, and they will not hesitate to extend that sympathy to the czar himself, when he shall definitely prove that he has bidden a permanent farewell to those agencies which push back the hands of the clock.

Anti-Jug Law for Covington.

Covington, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—Local advocates of the anti-jug law have given notice that at the forthcoming session of the general assembly a bill will be introduced looking to relief from the wholesale delivery of whisky at this point by the railroad and express companies. The act calls for an amendment to the present charter of the city, empowering the mayor and council to enact ordinances preventing the shipment of intoxicating liquors, wine or beer within the corporate limits of the town, to provide for a penalty for violations of same, as well as for seizure and disposition of said intoxicants.

Improvements at Newborn.

Newborn, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—The Farmers' Gin Company has just been organized here with a working capital of $5,000. The stock was subscribed by about thirty farmers of the community, and it is expected that the concern will enjoy a fine patronage from the planters throughout this section.

Dirt has been broken for the erection of the handsome new residence of J. W. Pitts, on Johnson street. The structure will cost in the neighborhood of $7,000, and will be equipped with all modern conveniences.

Bryce and Geronimo.

Lawton, Okla., June 16.—James Bryce, British ambassador, spent Sunday as the guest of the chamber of commerce, visiting Fort Sill, where he saw Chief Geronimo, of the Apaches, and Chief Quanah Parker, of the Comanches. At Sapulpa, speaking of the proposed Oklahoma constitution, he said:

"It is very good elementary law."

"Would you regard the constitution as too much in the nature of a legislative measure?" he was asked.

"Too much can never be put into a constitution," he replied.

Tax Increase at Gainesville.

Gainesville, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—The city assessors have turned in their books to the clerk of the city, and the showing is a very gratifying one. The real estate property for taxation this year amounts to $1,746,710, an increase of $148,140 over last year's return. The personal returns are $1,278,266.20, which is $98,064.95 more than was assessed last year, making a total taxation this year of $3,023,936.20, a total increase of $245,104.95.

Ginnery for Mansfield.

Mansfield, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—Realizing the need of an up-to-date ginnery for Mansfield, the representative business men of the town held a meeting and organized a company for the establishment of this enterprise. The capital stock was placed at $5,000, and every dollar of this sum was subscribed within two hours' time. The following board of directors was chosen: E. L. Almand, W. B. Hurst, S. R. Campbell, R. W. Campbell and A. E. Coogler.

Moved to Covington.

Covington, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—W. J. Maddox, a member of the well-known firm of J. J. and J. E. Maddox, of Atlanta, has removed with his family to this city. For the present they are occupying the R. C. Guinn residence near the Georgia depot. Mrs. Maddox is quite an acquisition to the social life of Covington.

CONSTITUTION ECHOES.

Overlooked Georgia.

(From The Seattle, Wash., Post Intelligencer.)

The Atlanta Constitution says "peaches are rosy and plenty." Evidently the peach crop liar has overlooked Georgia this year.

The Proper Training.

(From The Rome Tribune.)

Atlanta Constitution speaks of "training for the negro." The best training we know of would be to put him on a train and let it go until it stops.

Uppity.

(From the Washington, D. C., Herald.)

The Atlanta Constitution calls goobers "peanuts." Old-fashioned crackers will be inclined to think the Constitution a trifle "uppity" if it isn't careful.

A Fine Constitution.

(From The Rome Tribune.)

Apropos of all this talk about fine constitutions. What if you just had the Atlanta Constitution.

Which Kicked First?

(From The Alpharetta Free Press.)

The Atlanta Constitution says lightning recently killed two Georgia mules. The lightning must have kicked first.

Too Much Rain.

(From The Rome Tribune.)

A contemporary declares there is more to spring than love and poetry.—Atlanta Constitution.

Yes, we respectfully submit, there has been more rain to this spring than anything else.

Likes Stanton.

(From The Waycross Herald.)

The Atlanta Constitution is one of the reliable papers of the state. It belongs to the old line of journalism. It is the most popular paper in the southern states and is read by people in all parts of the country. It has strong editorials and the feature of the whole paper is Frank Stanton's department, which is alone worth the time of anyone to read.

Improves With Age.

(From The Chattanooga, Tenn., News.)

The Atlanta Constitution sagely remarks that "William Jennings Bryan is not as young as he was eleven years ago." Certainly he isn't, and the fact may be stated that, like wine, he improves with age.

Hard on Columbus.

(From The Fitzgerald Leader.)

The Atlanta papers contend that a young man who landed in Atlanta yesterday is crazy because he thought that he was in Columbus. Pretty hard on Columbus.

Suggestion Concerning Poets.

(From The Galveston Tribune.)

An Atlanta paper says one bird singing in the trees beats fifty poets whistling at the plow. Anyhow, that suggests what can be done to the poets.

Vastly Different.

(From The Waynesboro Citizen.)

The Atlanta papers have very studiously avoided trying the Bush case outside of the court house. This is vastly different from the New York papers and eminently just to the state and the defendant in getting a fair trial.

Not Guilty.

(From The Fitzgerald Leader.)

We note in a western weekly a vague allusion to the arrival in our midst of a Georgia millionaire. Wonder which one of us it is?—Constitution.

Not this one, to be sure.

A Sure Thing.

(From The Montezuma Leader.)

If Teddy will only visit Atlanta this fall he will be nominated for the third term by the Atlanta papers without any doubt.

A Great Discovery.

(From The Austin, Tex., Statesman.)

Really there is good in about everything. The Atlanta Constitution has discovered that there is good even in a train wreck. During the picnic season when the train wrecks, the passengers just alight and have a picnic on the spot.

Up to the Atlanta Papers.

(From The Enterprise, Ala., Ledger.)

A new warship has recently been launched known as the "Birmingham." It is now up to the Atlanta papers to tell how it happened.

The Squeeze Play.

(From The Montezuma Leader.)

James J. Jeffries has retired from the business of causing men to see stars, and is now handing out the liquid that causes the seeing of imaginary snakes and monkeys by those who look too often on the wine while it is red.

Uncle Remus's Magazine

An Admirable Literary Production.

(From The Rome Tribune.)

"Uncle Remus's" magazine is out, and it goes without saying that it is an admirable literary production.

All Right.

(From The Darien Gazette.)

Uncle Remus's Magazine has made its appearance and its all right. Mr. Joel Chandler Harris is the editor, which is a guarantee that every issue will be great.

A Success From the Jump.

(From The Nashville Herald.)

"Uncle Remus's Magazine" has arrived. It comes up to our expectations in quality and quantity. The Herald predicts that it will be a success from the jump.

Georgia's Favorite Son.

(From The Albany Herald.)

If political weather signs are to be trusted, it should prove an exceedingly simple matter to pick Georgia's favorite son. If the test is to be made broader we venture the opinion that her favorite son is named Harris. We are quite sure that if the women and children of the state are permitted to assist in eliminating the element of doubt—and more particularly if the people of the whole United States are allowed the privilege of voting—there will be such an overwhelming expression of opinion as will amount almost to unanimity. This favorite son of Georgia is known personally to a very few of those who love and admire him, but that makes no difference. He is ours, and we are his. We nominate "Uncle Remus" for favorite son.

STEAMER PULLED OFF SHOAL.

British Steamer Craigisla Grounded Wednesday Near Savannah.

Savannah, Ga., June 16.—The British steamer Craigisla was pulled off the shoal at the harbor's mouth this morning and towed to the city apparently undamaged. Part of the vessel's cargo of pyrites had to be thrown overboard before she was lightened sufficiently to float. Four tugs pulled her off. The Craigisla was bound for Savannah from Huelva. She gounded last Wednesday night.

GENERAL CHARLES HOOKER TALKS OF THE OLD TIMES

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 16.—(Special.)—A group of newspaper men were waiting in the office of the interstate commerce commission when a bent, gray-haired old gentleman, with the faded remnants of a once aristocratic and splendid bearing, appeared in the doorway and hesitated uncertainly.

He advanced slowly into the room and asked for General Francis M. Cockrill, of Missouri, a member of the commission. He spoke in the faintest wisp of a voice and looked keenly at the young chief clerk who passed close to him on the way to the inner room.

"Do you know me?" he asked in pained embarrassment.

The clerk was forced to confess that he did not.

"I am General Hooker, of Mississippi."

It was General Charles Edward Hooker, one of the ablest men who has been in congress since the civil war. He is now 82 years of age. While waiting for ex-Governor Cockrell he told his story.

"I came up from Mississippi to the confederate reunion at Richmond, and my ticket is good only on one route. I wish to change it so as to go back by another route, that I may see once more the red hills of South Carolina, where I was born and where I played in my youth."

Thus the interstate commerce commission's powers have been enlarged. Of course, indeed, the interstate commerce commission cannot help the general in such a manner. It is a little curious that he should ask them. But the old man is not, perhaps, as well posted as he once was with the affairs of the government. So many changes have of late been rung in upon things that the general has not been able to keep up with them.

General Hooker was born in Union county, "Union district," he called it, because it was long before the war when he left South Carolina. When he was only a boy. He has some relatives now in Union. His father came originally from Lawrens. His grandfather was a revolutionary soldier and a contemporary of the famous Bloody Bill Cunningham. Most of his life has been lived in Mississippi. He was one of the noted generals in the confederate army as all who are acquainted with the history of those stirring times know. He served as attorney general of the state of Mississippi, and then for twelve years he represented the Jackson district in congress.

"The first time I came to Washington," he told me, "I came with a letter of introduction to John C. Calhoun from my father."

"'Have you ever seen the president?' Mr. Calhoun asked me.

"'I have never been to the white house,' I replied.

"'Then I will take you up there,' he said.

"Mr. Calhoun took me by the hand and led me up to the white house and introduced me to President Pope."

General Hooker told me several interesting incidents which took place in the halls of congress before the war. He described part of a dramatic colloquy between Rhett, of South Carolina, and Representative John Quincy Adams, who became a representative of the lower house of congress after he had served as president of the United tSates. The general quoted the speeches of each in his eloquent, dramatic style. Though he spoke only in a whisper, he still has fire in him, and one could but think what a leader of men he had been in his prime. Now he is broken, feeble, and the once proud frame is bent.

NEW BUILDING OPENS OCT. 1

Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Structure Nears Completion.

Simultaneously with the operation of trains into Atlanta on October 1, of the present year, by the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad, the handsome new building for the general offics and headquarters for the company, located at Walton and Fairlie streets, will be opened. The building is five stories in height, constructed of oil pressed brick and steel, and is a model of architectural beauty, compactness and convenience.

Besides housing the officers and employees of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic, the ground floor will supply a comfortable and modern waiting room and freight depot for the cars of the Atlanta Northern railway, the electric road operated between Atlanta and Marietta. Instead of operating cars for the road over Marietta street to the postoffice, as at present, the cars will be run up Walton street from the junction at Marietta to the depo at Fairlie street.

The general officers of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic, who will be located in the new building, are President H. M. Atkinson, First Vice President Preston S. Arkwright, General Manager George Dale Wadley, Traffic Manager Rowland, General Freight Agent Campion, General Passenger Agent Lahey, Auditor Swayne, Chief Engineer Bonnyman, Secretary Cullinane and the employees of the various departments.

CITY NORMAL SCHOOL STARTS THIS MORNING

This morning at 8:30 o'clock at the boys' high school the normal school, conducted for the benefit of the teachers in the public schools of the city at Atlanta will hold its first meeting of the summer. It is understood from those in authority that special stress will be laid this year on the subjects of English, mathematics and history. Splendid arrangements have been made for the school and a very large attendance is expected. Aside from those teachers already connected with the public school system, it is expected that there will be many of those who will stand the examination for teachers' places at the July examination to avail themselves of this opportunity to prepare for the test. The normal school will be in session during the period of five weeks and will close on July 19.

STRENGTH OF MEXICAN ARMY.

Chihuahua, Mexico, June 16.—As a matter of form, the governors of the various states of Mexico have communicated to President Diaz a statement of the strength of the national guard and military resources of their states, which, according to dispatches received here, are as follows:

His Occupation.

"What is your occupation?" the magistrate asked John White, the other day in the Westminster police court, London.

"I steal pewter pots," replied the candid Mr. White.

LONG VACATION GIVEN DR. RICE

In Last Sermon He Urges Erection of Negro Mission Church.

To a full congregation at the Central Presbyterian church, Rev. Dr. Theron Rice delivered an earnest sermoon and the last message to his people for some time to come. After the dismissal of the general congregation, he explained in a brief statement that he had been granted an indefinite leave of absence to insure complete recovery of health by cessation of labor before his recuperating power was too much impaired.

"This church has for eight or nine years supported a negro mission Sunday school of one hundred to one hundred and fifty scholars," said Dr. Rice, in his sermon. "While there has been much said from time to time about the necessity of religious instruction of the negro by our people, the Central Presbyterian church has been quietly and steadily doing it. It has proven such a success that through contributions from various sources an eligible corner lot has been bought and paid for, and we need but twelve hundred dollars more to have enough to erect a suitable building for the work. It has been one of the joys of my pastorate that we all cooperate in church enterprises. We work heart and soul together and God has greatly blessed us. Now I ask not for a 'gift,' but that you subscribe the needed twelve hundred dollars for our negro mission. I seek 'fruit that will abound to your account.' What we pour out, not what we hoard, enlarges us. The church that gives is the church that gains.

"One of the fruits of such a course is our vindication to the name and character of Christian, for if truly such we will seek to benefit those who need help, and even to 'bless those who curse us and do good to them who hate us.' Men and women who thus live prove that their motive is not the praise of men but of God."

A subscription was taken from the congregation and the amount needed will be forthcoming for the negro mission church. The Central Presbyterian church has a very praiseworthy and exceptional record on this line.

IN THE COURTS

JUDGE ROAN will convene his court on June 24 for the purpose of disposing of bond cases.

Among those set down on the calendar, which will come up for trial unless there are legal showings for continuance, are those of Mack M. Turner, charged with embezzlement, and the nine bucket shop cases.

These are the cases in which there were ten defendants, one case being made a test case, and a thousand dollar fine being imposed in this case, which the supreme court affirmed.

The grand jury will meet again on June 21 to consider about forty bills. At a recent session they returned twenty true bills and two no bills.

During part of the coming week Judge Pendleton will hear motions. Jury business will be resumed in the city courts.

Anti-Saloon League at Savannah.

Savannah, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—An anti-saloon league was organized in Savannah tonight following an address by W. C. Davis of Atlanta. Committees were named and at a meeting to be held within a few days formal election of officers will be held. The members of the league have as their purpose the prohibition of the sale of liquor in Georgia.

Electric Lighting Plant Short-Lived.

During the past year the technical press has recorded the breaking down of a large number of municipal electric light plants because the equipment was worn out. It is interesting to note that in a large majority of cases, the necessity for abandoning or renewing the plant came at a period of from ten to fifteen years after it had been installed, showing that the deterioration by wear alone amounted to from 7 to 10 per cent a year.

According to the municipal ownership advocates who claim that an allowance of 3 per cent for depreciation is adequate, these plants should all have lived thirty years, yet wearing out is only one of the forms of depreciation, and most of these plants had been hopelessly out of date before their breakdown occurred.

Other cities may well take warning from the experience of these and make an allowance for maintenance and depreciation far in excess of the estimates of interested parties if they would avoid the thankless task of paying for broken down plants out of the tax levy.

SOME RARE ANIMALS BOUGHT FOR THE ZOO

Atlanta Park Committee Returns From New York. Zebra Given the City by Edward Buchanon, Millionaire Georgian.

MAYOR JOYNER, Secretary Dan Carey, Councilman Charley Chosewood and Councilman Wilkie, the special committee delegated to go to New York to hunt for wild animals for Grant park, arrived in the city yesterday afternoon. In the pocket of Secretary Carey were receipted bills for the following animals:

One striped zebra, price $650.
One female leopard, price $150.
Three monster male pig-tail monkeys; one male chacma baboon, price $200.
One male lion (of which a more detailed account is given below), price, $700.
Male and female puma, $150 each.
Male and female porcupine, $70 each.
One emu, an ostrich-like bird, price $100.
Two male and female toucan birds, price $20.
One red macaw, $10.
Two pair mandarin ducks, $6 per bird.
One male swan (white), $20.
Four female swan, $80.
One pair of black swan, $60.
Another pig-tail monkey, $20.
One blue-bellied monkey, $20.
One rhesus monkey, $9.
One chakma monkey, $40.
One drill monkey, $35.

By paying cash, the committee managed to get a discount of $116. They were given $2,000 to spend for animals and still have $150 left which they will spend for another female leopard as soon as a good one can be located.

Zebra Was a Present.

The committee played in great luck. After they had completed all of their purchases, they met Edward F. Buchanon, a young millionaire banker, whose former home was in Norcross, Ga., and who is now connected with the firm of A. O. Brown & Co. Mr. Buchanon left Norcross a poor boy, but soon struck it rich in New York. He is now reputed to be worth $10,000,000. He was delighted to meet the Atlanta party and entertained them royally at a dinner party at the Waldorf. During the dinner something was said about the fact that a zebra was the only thing necessary to make the committee entirely happy, but funds had run short and it was impossible to get one.

Mr. Buchanon immediately sent far his check book and handed Mayor Joyner a check for $650 to buy one.

By a unanimous vote it was instantly decided that the zebra should be named "Buch." It is a magnificently marked animal and will prove a great addition to the park.

Buchanon To Visit Norcross.

Mr. Buchanon recently built for his mother a magnificent $100,000 residence at Norcross. In a few days he and a party of fifteen friends are coming to Norcross to open the house. They will stop over in Atlanta and will be entertained by the animal committee while in the city.

Secretary Carey was pretty well tired out after the exciting chase the committee had in New York hunting animals, but he was vigorous and emphatic in his denial of the story that he was anxious to tear off a few yards of python at $66 per yard.

"The New York newspaper men had some rare sport out of us, but we enjoyed it as much as they did. The truth of the matter is, we did have considerable running about to do. The various dealers are located quite a distance from each other, and we had only a part of Wednesday, Thursday and Friday in which to make our purchases.

"It is only recently that attention has been given to breeding at the Grant park zoo. When we went to New York it was our purpose to secure, as near as possible, animals that would mate with others we already had. Thus we got a splendid lion for the lioness at the zoo. He is a magnificent animal and we have a guarantee that he can be returned if he does not prove up to the plans and specifications which we laid down."

Right here it may be well to state that the animal in question is said to be of husbandy tendencies and not at all given to star gazing.

"The collection of monkeys we got is fine. The monster pig-tail monkeys are a species with a very short tail, showing that they have evolved beyond the stage of the ordinary monkey. The chacma baboon was trained for the stage. He has long hair, is exceedingly intelligent and the owner did not care particularly to part with him. He is sure to prove a big pet of the children.

"The emu is an immense bird, something resembling an ostrich, whose principal diet is composed of bread crumbs and gravel. Unfortunately we could not get a mate for her and I am afraid she is destined to remain an old maid the balance of her days. The collection of monkeys is a varied one and contains specimens of all varieties. The swans will prove valuable and we will soon have quite a flock at Lake Abana."

The animals will be shipped at once and will arrive in Atlanta in a few days.

WANT A LIMIT FOR FRANCHISE

The Atlanta Telephone and Telegraph Company in the Limelight.

A perpetual franchise may be a good thing to possess when the company owning it goes into the money markets of the world, but in the case of the Atlanta Telephone company it may prove a serious handicap in getting further favors from the city fathers.

Councilman Terrell proposes to scotch the Atlanta Telephone company, to force them to agree to a limit to their franchise, and that unless they agree to a limitation, that in the future they be denied any permit to tear up the streets in extending their work.

Several council members have reached a serious mood in their reflections on this question, Councilman Pomeroy and Alderman Hirsch both being outspoken in opposition to the grant of any longer permit relative to the company prolonging the tearing up of the Boulevard.

The North Georgia Electric company wanted a year's extension as to the time limit in which they were to build into Atlanta. This company has an arrangement by which they were to come in in connection with the Atlanta Telephone company, using their ducts and conduits.

Preserved.

NO CONCERTS AT THE PARK

Although $1,200 Has Been Appropriated for This Purpose.

Thousands of people were at Grant park yesterday afternoon roaming around enjoying the scenery but—

There was no band concert.

No band concert was advertised, it is true, but why there was no band concert caused general comment.

For several years band concerts at Grant park on Sunday afternoon have been features which were enjoyed by thousands, and this year they have been greatly missed.

At a meeting of the park board heid several weeks ago $1,200 was passed up for sacred concerts on Sunday and during two evenings in the week, but thus far no concert has been given, although a contract was entered into with Weidemeyer's band shortly after the money was passed up.

There was a concert over at White City, some distance from the park, and many persons left the park and went to that place.

Dan Carey, secretary of the park board, who arrived in the city from New York yesterday, was asked why the concerts had not been given as the public had been led to expect, and replied that he was at a loss to know the reason as the money was available and the contract entered into.

YOUTH FATALLY WOUNDS WOMAN.

Did Not Like Remark She Made, So He Shot Her.

Knoxville, Tenn., June 16.—Police and county officers are searching for John Rodgers, a white lad of 16 years, wanted for probably fatally shooting Mrs. Alice Baker at a restaurant in this city Saturday about midnight. The woman was shot in the left breast, the ball ranging downward to the bowels, and rendering the wound dangerous.

The woman is said to have addressed a remark to Rodgers in reply to a query from him, that was not to his liking, and he pulled his pistol and fired, then realizing what he had done, skipped out and so far has not been located. The woman is married and has three small children.

Rodgers is a cousin to John McPherson, the desperado, who made such a night of crime nearly a year ago, and who has just been captured and returned to this city.

EPISCOPALIANS CELEBRATE TERCENTENARY OF CHURCH

CATHEDRAL WAS FILLED AT THE UNION SERVICES

Bishop Nelson Delivered a Strong Sermon on Founding of Church and Blessings It Has Brought to Nation—Liberal Contribution to Thank Offering.

The Episcopalians of Atlanta yesterday fittingly commemorated the three hundredth anniversary of the establishment of English Christianity in North America.

At the morning service in all the churches holy communion was celebrated, and at night there was a great union meeting at St. Philip's cathedral in the interest of the thank-offering to be made by the men of the church as an expression of their gratitude for the blessings which three hundred years of the Christianity established by the English colonists at Jamestown in 1607 has brought to North America.

Great Crowd at Union Service.

Rarely has St. Philip's held such a large congregation as was present when the union service began at 8 o'clock last night.

Mr. J. Fowler-Richardson was at the organ and the choirs of the cathedral, All Saints' and St. Luke's took part in the musical program.

Right Rev. C. K. Nelson, bishop of Georgia, was in charge of the service, and he was assisted by the following clergy: Right Rev. Albion W. Knight, D.D., bishop of Cuba; Very Rev. Charles T. A. Pise, D.D., dean of the cathedral; Rev. C. B. Wilmer, D.D., rector of St. Luke's church; Rev. Z. R. Farland, rector of All Saints church; Rev. J. J. P. Perry, rector of the Church of the Incarnation; Rev. Gilbert Higgs, D.D., rector of the Holy Comforter; Rev. C. A. Langston, rector of the Church of the Epiphany; Rev. Henry D. Phillips, rector of St. Mark's, LaGrange, Ga.

Strong Sermon by Bishop Nelson.

Bishop Nelson delivered the sermon, which was a powerful plea for Episcopalians to claim the heritage which belongs to them because of the historic fact that their church was the pioneer in founding English Christianity on this continent. The bishop appealed to the men of the church to show their appreciation of the blessings which the church has brought to this nation by contributing liberally to the thank-offering so that the diocese of Georgia may make a good showing at the general convention to be held in Richmond next October.

In response to the bishop's plea, a generous sum was given last night, but the work for the thank-offering will be continued till the meeting of the general convention so that this diocese may do its full part towards the raising of this great memorial fund which is to be used to strengthen the church as a missionary force.

Text of Bishop Nelson's Sermon.

Bishop Nelson's subject was "The Planting of a Colony and the Founding of a Church." The sermon in full follows:

Jeremiah vi, 16: Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein.

"Our country, which, until very recently, has been usually referred to as 'the new land,' has reached an age and an experience which render it appropriate to keep commemorative days and to establish monuments of the past.

"It is an ignoble or decadent race which centers all its thought upon the present and a nation or a community which has no retrospect can have no great prospect. We live and thrive largely on past events and people. It is a part of the glory and commendation of our age that we have at least begun to reverence our ancestors and to recall in suitable celebrations and enduring memorials the events upon which the life and growth and achievements of our nation are established. The appointment of days and the selecting of statues and shafts ought to be well considered, for they are symbols of intelligence and of development in civilization, or of ignorance and prejudice; and the ages which come after us will judge whether we have erected totem poles for some local celebrity who killed a bear or a dozen wolves, or whether our festival and its attendant memorial signalize occurrences which touch the deepest springs of life and call for imitation in courage, in loyalty, in glowing faith, in philanthropy, in Christian beneficence, whose reach clear outpasses local needs or a particular era and merges into the welfare and perpetual advance of peoples yet unborn.

The Landing at Jamestown.

"Of such enduring interest and value are the discoveries of Galileo and of Newton, of Harvey and Watt and Morse and Edison; of first rank in the world's history is the signing of Magna Charter, the effecting of the reformations in England and on the continent, the destruction of the Spanish Armada, the battle of Waterloo and of Bunker Hill, not to recount later events. Some of these passed into history with the noise and terror of a volcanic eruption; others with no more jarring than the breaking of the day. To this latter class belongs the momentous circumstance of June 17-21, 1607. When three little ships from the old world came to anchor in the James river, 60 miles from its mouth, and the voyagers proceeded to build first a fort to protect themselves from savages and then a church of the simplest and rudest form, they performed a feat for which this continent owes a debt of gratitude not to be estimated in wealth or power, but in the perpetuation and extension of the principles of these first settlers.

"For here at what came to be known as Jamestown not only did 'the old world first meet the new,' but here was the beginning of that power which has stretched its influence, its freedom and its religion to the shores of another ocean.

Colonists Brought the Church.

"With the best characteristics of Anglo-Saxon civilization, love of country, sense of liberty and the culture derived from books, they brought with them reverence for God and a definite religion which had a place and a part in their daily affairs. So when the Rev. Robert Hunt, on the third Sunday after Trinity, June 21, 1607, preached under an old sail for a roof and celebrated the Holy Communion, doubtless on the stump of a tree with an unhewn log for a communion rail, he founded the Church of England in America, and gave to the new land a benediction in the form and words of that primitive liturgy which, through innumerable vicissitudes of centuries, has descended to us from apostolic days; and by these tokens set up a claim which, despite objections and opposition, has been maintained ever since that the church of the Bible and the prayer book, the church with its historic orders, its Scriptural creed and sacraments and orderly worship, that the church which is Holy Catholic and Apostolic, is the church for American people. The church which in all England's struggles for civil and religious liberty had ever maintained her steadfastness to the highest principles and loyalty to her Divine Head was none too good to bring to this far-off world. It provided the daily worship of the colonists; it was the teacher of the government, of the tradesmen and the servants; it was the missionary force of all efforts to extend the gospel and is ours today with the increase of years and the plentiful harvest of noble men and women in all the walks of life.

Commemorate Founders of Church.

"The state sooner than the church has felt the importance of emphasizing the early events in this republic. The battles of the revolution had their monuments and the heroes of the past their mausoleums before the church felt the thrill of her ancestral possessions and realized that she could not afford to neglect the present for the past; but it has been found a false philosophy and in ecclesiastical no less than in civil affairs there are occasions and there are men whom the church cannot wisely ignore. We have been too modest recalling the honored list and in marking the resting places of American saints; we have been far too careless in preserving our antiquities; we have allowed our heritage to be hidden under a false modesty and excessive respectability until the world moving by has never seen the tokens of the influence of churchmen in the councils of the nation and the strength of our communion in the training of citizens, of generals and of legislators. It is time we should turn over a new leaf.

"We are wont to speak of an established religion as though it meant a religion authorized and sustained by the civil powers; this and this only. There is another and entirely different view, namely, a religion established by priority of evangelization with continuity of system and order. In this sense this is a Christian nation; in this sense the religion of the Protestant Episcopal church as the daughter of the Church of England is the established religion of America and is worthy to be so regarded.

They Founded Anglican Catholicism

"The men who landed from those three ships and set up a worship did not establish Buddhism or Confucianism, but Christianity, and the form of Christianity was not Arcabaptism or Calvanism or Methodism, but Catholicism of the Anglican type and model. Again, they did not find any church here, so that the field was clear, and they did not found any new church, but transplanted to new soil, amid new surroundings, the old church which had come down to them from the apostles. And they not only secured for themselves freedom to worship God, but they allowed others the freedom which they dearly bought and they left of record deeds, not words only, of their purposes and their intentions which show that there is no rhyme nor reason nor sense nor argument in the theory which some modern speakers have bolstered by specious remarks that some other church was the first founded on American soil. The church of which Robert Hunt was a minister, continued to teach and to grow with the same Bible, the same sacraments, the same orders, the same creed, the same worship then as now, not contemplating anything different, nor doubting that their testimony witnessed in the beginning of the seventeenth century, would be borne by their successors in the eighteenth and nineteenth and twentieth centuries and so forward to the end of the world.

Colony and Church Synchronous.

"The planting of a colony and the planting of a church of clear pedigree were synchronous and mutually helpful. They who blazed the way so intended, and they so began when they set foot on these shores. We, brthren, you and I, and the people gathered here, are the inheritors of the precious blessings of civil liberty and churchly ways which were new born on the continent of America with the coming of these seekers for room and place to live and practice the old religion of their ancestors. As pioneers in state and in church they are deserving of honors and merit which can never be dimmed by the greatness of after ages. They were the first; they planted, they suffered, they lived and died as men who had a vocation and endeavored to realize that it is not enough to live and save ourselves, but that we ought to live to save others.

"There was on the church side the existence of the Pauline principle of a debt which he owed to those who had not heard the gospel. There was the same desire indicated 'to preach where Christ was not preached' and 'in the regions beyond.'

"And there was with these the sturdy maintenance of the principle of authority in religion—a principle which it is now very much in vogue to criticize, if not to deny. In honor of such as these, assuredly spake Jesus, the Son of Sirach, 'Let us now praise famous men, and our fathers that begat us. The Lord allotted great glory to them, and they were mighty in power from the beginning, . . . such as did bear rule . . . such as gave counsel by their understanding, . . . rules of the people in their insight, . . . there were godly men whose righteousness shall not be forgotten. . . . Their memory shall remain for ever and their glory shall not be blotted out. . . . The people will tell of their wisdom, and the congregation will show forth their praise.' Eccles. 44. What then men and brethren, is there that we can say and do three hundred years after the circumstances of that settlement at Jamestown?

The Duty of Churchmen.

"Now that the blood of those pioneers has ceased to mingle with the waters of the James, and their ashes have become one with the sands, while the rich marsh grasses cover their hastily made graves, the wild flowers wave their benediction of beauty, and the birds sing uninterrupted praises on that quiet shore where human voices are silent, it is a duty which we owe to ourselves and our heirs and assigns no less than to those who purchased these possessions for us to render available for multitudes in our own land the truths and principles of the gospel so nobly heralded.

"It is our privilege, being as Sydney Smith said, not the youngest, but the oldest people, because we have all the past behind us, it is ours to enjoy the opportunity for putting all our learning and all the splendid examples into effective practice.

"All thinking and honest people upbraid the sleek and overfed sons who never earned a dollar by any honest effort, but simply wear themselves out spending the accumulations of their fathers, with no sense of responsibility for others, no consideration of the woes, the hunger, the pain, the ignorance of mankind. How can we claim to be any improvement on these unworthy scions of industrious and patient toilers if in our spiritual relationship, in our church life, in filling our place in the world, we 'lie supinely on our backs' while the great, throbbing, sinning, self-crazed world moves on, or how can we rest in the sunny consciousness that we have great possessions and will enjoy them or not at our pleasure?

"It will not do merely to aid in the restoration of the church on Jamestown island, or in erecting a brass to Chaplain Robert Hunt. It will not do to enter into an exposition of our material progress and of the development of our genius. It will not do to march over the ground with sound of music, or sail over the course while cannon boom the bass of a peace hymn to the Creator. These things impart a certain stimulus to endeavor; they mark the advance of three centuries and prepare us for greater achievements yet to come.

Missionary Work Urged.

"But the only proper mark of appreciation of the great deeds of old; the only sufficient expression of gratitude to Him who has guided us all these days, and still through good men controls our destinies; the test and the measure of our worthiness to inherit their name and their fame the only protection against arrant selfishness and lust of bigness (soon degenerating into coarseness and folly), the salvation of our real and permanent greatness is increase in the number of those who share our benefits, to enlarge the bounds as well as add to the depth and height of the kingdom of our blessed Redeemer.

"For this the men's thank offering is an organized agency of the highest importance, set going for manifesting our gratitude to God for country and church and home with peace and prosperity, by our gifts that will enable others to do for us what we cannot do for ourselves—to be missionaries mediately unless there be among you who can give yourselves with your alms.

"It is the plan and purpose of this movement that not one member of the church (I speak of baptized members) who as a man represents either himself or others, shall be omitted from the list of those whose offerings will be presented with prayer and praise at the approaching meeting of churchmen in October—of praise for the unspeakable goodness of our fathers' God and ours, of prayer that 'His way may be known upon earth: His saving health among all nations.'

"This is not one opportunity in a lifetime, but one opportunity in three centuries of the nation's and the church's life. This is a movement which has to commend it the prayerful consideration and the highest commendation of those whom you revere for their wisdom and godliness and whom you love for their works' sake.

United Act of Great Communion.

"It is to be the united act of a great communion which has preserved to our country the Catholic heritage of truth and righteousness and has made of us sons of God and heirs of eternal life.

"Is it reasonable, is it right that you and I or any churchman in the diocese of Georgia should permit churchmen in other sections to absorb a privilege which is ours?

"Shall we allow their thousands to exclude our hundreds or let it be said as it could be said if we remain negligent or inactive, that the men of this diocese which had its origin in the benefactions of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel of this diocese, which has received over $125,000 within ten years for its own advance, that this diocese, which has doubled in communicants and in resources, is unwilling, not unable, to have a lot and a part in a special gift which will enable the church of our land to start the fourth century with a telling impetus, and with the means in hand to initiate new movements for the expansion of the kingdom of God's dear Son?

"Unless the church in this diocese comes now to join in this movement with generous impulse and grateful hearts and open purses, I shall feel that my fifteen years to promote practical unity in faith and service, and to break down the walls of parochialism and congregationalism and self-inclusiveness has been in certain important respects a failure.

"Let us beware now of participating in that terrible denunciation of a people who sat still and looked on while others bled and died for home and safety, while they basely availed themselves of the benefits. 'Come ye, Meroz, said the angel of the Lord, curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof; because they came not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty.' Judges v, 23. 'Let thine enemies perish, O Lord: but let them that love Him be as the Son when He goeth forth in his might.'"

Rev. Henry Phillips Ordained Priest.

The morning service at St. Philip's was also largely attended and was very impressive. Rev. Henry D. Phillips, who has served a year in the diaconate, was ordained to the priesthood. Right Rev. Albion W. Knight, missionary bishop of Cuba, delivering the ordination sermon. Following the impressive ordination service, holy communion was celebrated, Bishop Nelson being the celebrant, Bishop Knight and Dean Pise, of the cathedral, assisting.

DR. BROUGHTON TALKS OF JONES

Minister Explains His Position in Regard to the Case.

In his prelude to his Sunday night sermon last night Dr. Broughton made his position plain in regard to the recent criticism of the court by the detectives in the Charlie Jones case, and the statement by the judge that Dr. Broughton had recommended clemency.

Dr. Broughton explained in detail his connection with the affair. He had at first criticised the judge for not bringing the young man to trial. Jones left the city, and wrote him a letter that he had repented and reformed and asserted his positive determination to refrain for all time to cease from gambling.

Dr. Broughton said he was impressed with Jones' good faith and wrote him a letter in reply that he had no desire to persecute any one, his main purpose being to see the laws enforced and evil doers brought to justice, and believing in his repentance, he would recommend that punishment in his case be held up, conditioned upon his right conduct in the future.

Dr. Broughton wrote to Judge Calhoun and Solicitor Arnold stating these facts, inclosing a copy of his letter to Jones, and expressing his willingness for Jones to return to Atlanta, this sentence to hang over him pending his residence here after his return and as a guarantee of his genuine repentance.

This fact in some way reached Jones, and he returned to the city, immediately calling upon Dr. Broughton at his residence and having nearly an hour's conference with him, reiterating his former promise to abstain from gambling.

Dr. Broughton gave this explanation in view of the inference that his action might be construed as shielding a gambler. He told the great audience plainly that he was willing to help any man to a life of reformation, but none stood for a more vigorous warfare upon gamblers and evil doers in this city than he.

The Time to Act is NOW

As long as death is certain and its coming is uncertain, every man with responsibility must admit that the time to act is now. In its sixty-four years of history the Mutual Life has paid its policy holders 738 millions because they acted on the idea that the time to act is now. This vast sum would have been vastly greater had it included the patronage of men with equal means, in equal health, with equal needs, who failed to apply the truth that the time to act is now.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company

has done untold good, has brought untold comfort to the needy as it has faithfully discharged its accruing obligations, but it has no way of helping the man who does not come to realize that the time to act is now. Let us show you what can be done to-day.

SEVEN BISHOPS FILL PULPITS OF METHODISTS

Full College of Southern Church Heard in Atlanta Yesterday Morning.

ELOQUENT PLEAS MADE FOR WESLEY MEMORIAL

Church-Goers Given an Opportunity Which Rarely Comes to People of Any City—Large Crowds Heard Speakers—Much Enthusiasm Shown.

The entire Episcopal college of the Methodist Episcopal church, South was monopolized by Atlanta yesterday, the occasion of the presence of the seven bishops of the church being the launching of the Wesley Memorial enterprises.

Bishop Charles B. Galloway, at Trinity; Bishop H. C. Morrison, at First church; Bishop Seth Ward, at Park street; Bishop James Atkins, at Walker street; Bishop E. R. Hendrix, at St. Mark's; Bishop Warren A. Candler, at Grace, and Bishop J. S. Key, at Wesley Memorial, were the chief pulpit attractions of the day, but at Decatur Dr. J. C. Kilgo, president of Trinity college of North Carolina, was heard and at College Park Dr. J. E. Dickey, president of Emory college, filled the pulpit, while at all the other Methodist churches in the city special services were held in connection with the Wesley Memorial movement.

Bishop Galloway at Trinity.

To more than two thousand people, crowded into the seats and aisles of Trinity church, Bishop Charles B. Galloway spoke for more than an hour yesterday morning.

The bishop, though somewhat worn from his recent illness, spoke eloquently, and held the close attention of the very large audience.

He read for a lesson the 47th chapter of Ezekiel, and selected for his text the latter clause of the 9th verse: "Every thing shall live, whither the river cometh."

He spoke first on the interesting study of individuals, using as illustrations, Elijah, Elisha, and John the Baptist, a man of strong nerve, and high courage.

He said that the "man and the hour" always met, that "when the ages call, the heroes come," but that among the prophets of the olden time, Ezekiel exceled them all, "holding a distinct and unique place among the great leaders of the far away time."

He spoke of the trials and difficulties of Ezekiel, saying that the most cheerful ministries came from those who suffered persecution. He said that there was no limitations to spiritual possibilities. That among all visions there was none more practical than this of the holy waters.

He called attention to the fact that the temple, though beautiful, symmetrical and flawless, was incomplete until the inspired prophet had the visions of the water from underneath the altar. The church has a long history, he said, but it can accomplish absolutely nothing without the constant presence and guidance of the Holy Spirit. He called attention to the fact that the waters issued from underneath the altar,—symbolic that the church is the divinely ordained channel for distribution. He called attention to secret orders, and while he had nothing against them, he said that much power for good had been taken away from the church because of these orders.

He emphasized the fact that the life-giving power and grace of God distributed through the channel of the church, blessed everything. He discussed all phases of life that were blessed and spoke eloquently of the blessings which the new conception of God had brought upon the church.

In a beautiful way he drew contrasts between the heathen conception of God and Christianity's conception, discussing this idea under several heads:

(1) God is all-powerful, omnipotent.

(2) God, the Father of men.

(3) The Christian's relation to his fellow man. The Christian's conception of womanhood, and of childhood, as contrasted with the heathen conception.

(4) The Christian nation's relation with other nations.

Then, in a magnificent peroration, he said that the spirit of Christ alone could redeem this planet,—solving every difficulty. He said that the north's problem with the foreign element was greater than the south's problem with the negro.

He said that the time had passed when our cities could be redeemed merely by protracted meetings, but only by system—relieving the oppressed and alleviating the pain of suffering ones, all men could be won to Christ.

He then presented the Wesley Memorial enterprise, and said that all Methodists should contribute liberally, that this should be "One great enterprise built with all our hearts and all our hands."

He then called for contributions, and between $7,000 and $10,000 was raised by subscriptions.

Dr. M. J. Cofer was present and assisted in the collections, as did Mr. Asa Candler, who made a stirring address.

Bishop Morrison at First.

At the First Methodist, Bishop H. C. Morrison took for his theme, "The Credentials of Christianity," and in the forceful sermon he laid particular stress on that one credential that calls for a giving of one-tenth to God.

Preliminary to his dissertation he outlined the object of the great evangelical gathering in Atlanta, stating that it was too great a work to be undertaken by one church alone, and called for the combined efforts of Methodism, now powerful in finance as well as in other ways.

"The least a Christian can do," said Bishop Morrison, "is to give one-tenth of all he possesses to God." This was quite in keeping with the occasion, he went on to say, and it was the duty of every Christian to contribute that much at least to the great cause before them.

"Keep books with God" was another expression along the same line, and the great divine drew a very lucid picture of the business man keeping God's account on one side of the ledger opposite to the material figures on the other.

Laymen and others would find fault, said he, with a congregation that expended an enormous sum toward erecting for themselves a magnificent temple, but man would be beyond power of criticism were millions of dollars given for the memorial enterprises founded for the good of the commonwealth. "Some me nare so rich that they will have to hustle to get rid of their riches in time for the meeting with the pale horse and the pale rider" was another striking expression he used in connection with the Biblical quotation, "A rich man can hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven." "Serve God by serving humanity" was another striking phrase.

Tears welled into the great man's eyes more than once during the discourse that reached into the innermost souls of a congregation filling the spacious church to its very doors, and these were the result of the earnestness with which he drew graphic descriptions of the alleviation of miserable suffering of divers kinds that could only be wrought through the medium of the Wesley Memorial hospital and its adjuncts.

All of this had its reward. The members of the church responded liberally. Among the subscriptions was that of George Winship, who gave $10,000, the largest amount individually contributed.

Bishop Candler at Grace.

At Grace church, corner Boulevard and Highland avenue, Bishop Warren A. Candler filled the pulpit at the morning service and delivered a powerful sermon, closing with a moving plea for the establishment of the Wesley Memorial enterprises.

Bishop Candler's theme was the supremacy of spiritual influence in the solution of the problems which humanity faces. He showed how wealth and power had failed to preserve those nations which have fallen into moral and spiritual decay, and then pointed out dangers which the south is confronting today as the result of its unequaled prosperity.

From Ezekiel he read the curse on the false shepherds who had allowed the flocks to be scattered and to them compared Christ, the Good Shepherd. How easily the young men and women who are constantly pouring into Atlanta may be led astray was pointed out, and the duty of Christians to see that proper opportunities are put before them.

The purposes of the great Methodist movement, which is to provide a central house of worship in Atlanta for those who live in the business district, for the strangers who may be in the city's gates, a home for the young man or the young woman who comes from a Christian home in the country to the temptations of a life in the city, a hospital in which they may be taken care of when ill, were explained, showing that the enterprise is one which not only vitally interests the 14,000 Methodists in Atlanta, but the members of every church in the state, and for that matter all who feel an interest in the welfare of the young men and women of today, on whom the burdens of church and state will in a few years rest.

Bishop Candler was never more forceful when he called for a truce to the useless arguments over dogmas and so-called advanced thought and an appeal for conscientious work to save those who are, through the neglect of the church, falling in the hands of its enemies.

So forceful was his plea that Grace church, which has only recently completed an handsome building on which a large sum is yet to be paid, contributed over $5,000 to the Wesleyan movement.

Bishop Key at Wesleyan.

Bishop Key, of Texas, formerly a Georgian, delivered a powerful sermon at the Wesleyan Tabernacle yesterday to a large audience, on the salvation of young men, taking his text from David's agonized cry, "Is My Son Absalom Safe?"

In elaborating upon his text, Bishop Key stated that never before in the history of the world was there such an absurdity of faiths as at the present time, and that no class is being so enmeshed in their swirling currents as the young men.

Incidentally he made a strong protest against foreign immigration from a religious standpoint, saying that already the Protestants of America had in many cities sacrificed their religious duty, and given up the Bible in the public schools out of regard for the feeling of Catholics, Jews and agnostics.

Bishop Key stated that 70 per cent of the prisoners in this country are young men, and 95 per cent of the crimes were committed by young men, while of the approximately 10,000,000 young men in America, only 5 per cent were church members. The root of the evil, said the preacher, lies in ungodly marriages, which lead to improper raising of children, and that as truly as the agony of David's cry grew out of the knowledge that he had been remiss in his duty as a father, this was the explanation of the fact that 95 per cent of our young men are non-church members.

In speaking of the movement which had brought him to Atlanta, Bishop Key said that it was with the profoundest joy that he had responded to this call to aid in the enlarging of this most promising institution—the most needed thing in the south today. The speaker was particularly eloquent in painting the future of the movement.

At the conclusion of his sermon Bishop Key subscribed $100 a year for the balance of his life.

Announcement was made that over $9,500 had already been contributed by the members of the church and its societies, and at an after meeting several thousand dollars more were subscribed.

Bishop Ward at Park Street.

Stirring scenes were enacted at Park Street Methodist church yesterday morning when Bishop Seth Ward preached an eloquent and masterful sermon from the text in Romans 13:12, "The night is far spent. Day is at hand. Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness and put on the armor of light."

His sermon was pitched along the line of thought that the church of today must meet the conditions of the century of light. That the night had passed and that today we are face to face with changed conditions.

He urged that the institutional church of today is a necessity, and that no one Methodist Episcopal church of Atlanta could accomplish what is needed.

In part Bishop Ward said:

"The text is a statement of the changing order of the world, and the changing character, therefore, necessarily of Christianity in its touch with humanity and world conditions. The brush arbor was all right in its day—but we must build hospitals and great churches today.

"The scriptural order of things is stated in 'first the blade, then the ear, and then the full corn in the ear.' This same order is true in organized effort, as well as individual.

"From its earliest days the church has faced towards the sunshine, and the spirit of progress has been uppermost in her heart. I firmly believe that the church of today stands well in advance of former days. And I dare to believe that the church of tomorrow will be better in every way than the church of today.

"Our text implies a challenge—a call to the church—and she must recognize it. It points to the changing order of the world, and says to her that she must adjust herself to changed condition.

"The church of God is living and must work today in the midst of new social conditions. It is confronted by vast dreams of wealth and pitiful and bitter poverty—the poverty all the more bitter because side by side with such wealth. We have the rich man in his palace and the tramp in the alley.

"We also have in this day any time new doubts to fight and answer. Our faith must be firm and nothing but the old gospel preached. It is capable today to do God's work, and will do it if we are faithful. It is not necessary to whittle down the gospel to suit men—but rather lift men up and make them as big and broad as the gospel wants them to be.

"The church today must be as wise as the politician or the man of commerce. It should know the men of Atlanta—where they live, their needs, inclinations and temptations—as effectually and perfectly as the slickest set of politicians who ever plied their craft in any place.

"The Methodist church has evolved the most effective way of reaching the rural sections—now let her step forward and evolve the best plan for holding to the cities and congested centers."

In conclusion, he outlined the plan proposed for an institutional church on the site of the Wesley Memorial Tabernacle lot, and followed this with a call for subscriptions to the new enterprise.

Bishop Hendrix at St. Mark's.

Bishop Hendrix, of Missouri, attracted a large congregation to St. Mark's, which was thrown open to the public for the first time in several weeks, as the interior had been undergoing a number of repairs and decoration. The church was tastefully adorned with palms and potted plants in honor of the special services for the Wesley Memorial exercises, and presented a most attractive appearance.

Bishop Hendrix selected as his text St. Luke xxiv, 40: "And when the Lord had thus spoken, He showed unto them His hand."

"The hand," said Bishop Hendrix, "is the symbol of sovereignty of man and sets him apart from other of God's creatures. The biography of the hand of Christ was but the history of the life of the Son of God."

Taking the hand of Christ as the symbol of His life's work, Bishop Hendrix divided the subject into four heads.

First, he spoke of the industry which had entered into the life of the Savior and pictured His career as a carpenter and of the humble physical labor which He performed as a young man.

Second, of the power of the hand. Christ's hand had been responsible for the uplift of the world. No human hand would ever wield a scepter over the entire world, but Christ's hand had done more than all others.

Third, he spoke of the sympathy of the hand, and drew several beautiful pictures of the delicacy of the touch of Christ's hand and the sympathetic influence of His power. Power was as naught without sympathy, he said.

"Sacrifice," said Bishop Hendrix, "was as necessary as any of the other qualities. Self-preservation was the first law of nature, but self-sacrifice was the law of grace. Self-preservation was the law of the lower animal; it was only through sacrifice that man ascended to the heights of greatest humanity and spirituality."

"The scars of Christ's hand," said the speaker, "ruled the world."

Bishop Hendrix concluded his remarks by stating that an open hand would contain more than a closed fist, and urged his hearers to contribute liberally to the Wesley Memorial, which, he said, would do such a great work for the city and the state of Georgia, where John Wesley had once preached the gospel. He asked for liberal, Christ-like contributions.

Bishop Atkins at Walker Street.

Bishop James Atkins of the Pacific Coast conference, who was elevated to the bishopric a year ago, occupied the pulpit at the Walker Street Methodist church yesterday morning, and spoke most interestingly to a large and responsive congregation.

Three thousand dollars were easily and quickly raised, once the bishop made his appeal.

"And I say unto you, Make to yourselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; that when you fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations."—St. Luke, 16th chapter, 9th verse.

Bishop Atkins, a North Carolinian, his home being at Waynesville, caught the attention of his audience with his introductory remarks. Clear and distinct in his utterances, his voice, well modulated, reached easily to every section of the auditorium. His language was choice and select, while his delivery indicated quickly that the congregation was listening to an orator and a fluent talker. He held close to his text, never making reference to his mission after his introductory remarks until he had finished his sermon.

Then the bishop said he hoped the members of the congregation had not fixed a sum in their minds as a limit for the morning's work. True it was generally understood that there were other churches in the city which could afford to give more. Still that was no reason why the Walker Street church congregation should not give to the limit of its ability. It was not a beg the bishop made. He showed his hearers how every one who gave would be more than recompensed directly. He told of the great good that could and would be accomplished by the money then being raised in Atlanta churches.

The first gift was $500. Then the sums sank until twenty-five dollars, payable in five yearly installments, were given. While the work was slow, the responses were open, sympathetic, and full of energy.

Dr. Kilgo at Decatur.

In his prelude to the regular sermon, Dr. J. C. Kilgo, at the Decatur Methodist church, made special reference to the great undertaking the church had on hand, emphasizing the fact that if it was to be built for the uplifting of mankind and the spread of the gospel it would be for the glory of God, but that if it were a cheap game of competition with any other church it would not deserve to succeed, or even if intended as a mere monument to man.

The idea suggested in this illustration was that the first thought should be for the lasting glory of God, and the uplifting and saving of mankind. It was his special delight to have part in this great movement, he said. A church of this character was needed in Atlanta, in which young women working in the offices and the stores might find a congenial social environment, and to draw young men away from the fearful influences of some characters of our amusements, such as the theaters and the like.

This church would not be any more in conflict with the First church, said the gifted speaker, than the First with it. Both had their fields open of usefulness, as God, in His plan, had designed different classes in the world. The Wesley church could no more reach the people of the First church than those of the First could reach those of Wesley.

From this prelude the speaker launched into an eloquent discourse, the central theme running through his remarks being that the church is too prone to condemn rather than forgive, and the character of the Lord was held up for their emulation in this respect. The Lord's mission on earth was to reclaim the sinner and not down him. Christ's forgiveness to Peter was held up as a shining example of this when the bystanders were ready to condemn.

The highest type of man was his God-likeness was another thought suggested in the theme, while the relative comparison of the human and divine love was delineated in glowing terms, the latter as showing great mercy and compassion

With marked effect the speaker enchained the attention of the audience in the declaration that the greatest heresy of the day was the tendency of the church to lean toward the world.

The hospital department of the new church enterprise was spoken of, the speaker emphasizing the fact that those were the places where prayer was most needed.

The too great tendency of the church today, he said, was not so much in saving as in damning.

Dr. Kilgo is the president of Trinity college, North Carolina, and the Decatur church was especially proud in having the distinguished divine to fill its pulpit.

RISE OF ASA G. CANDLER FROM POVERTY TO WEALTH

Interesting Story of Early Struggles of the Man Who Yesterday Subscribed $75,000 to the Wesley Memorial Fund.

By ALAN ROGERS.

WITH the raising of over $200,000 for the erection of the Wesley Memorial enterprises and the launching of this great movement by all of the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now in this country, a little story which teems with human interest regarding the practical side of this great proposition and the man who helped to make success possible, is certain to prove helpfully interesting.

In giving this story to the public it may be that I am betraying the confidence of the committee room; in fact, I am so sure of this that I am writing it now and mean to ask Asa G. Candler's consent about using it after it appears in The Constitution in the morning.

That little incidents lead to great enterprises is quite as true as the old axiom about the acorn and the oak. In this particular instance, perhaps the sleeping of three in a bed in a boarding house in Atlanta a good many years ago is chiefly responsible for the giving of a great institutional church work to Atlanta and Georgia at this immediate present rather than at some indefinite date in the future. To explain this very awkward statement, it is necessary to turn back a good many pages in the great book of time and also to remember that the Wesley Memorial enterprises received for its practical foundation a subscription of $50,000 from Mr Asa Candler at the very inception of the movement. Incidentally, when it was determined by those in a position to know that $200,000 was absolutely essential for the building of such a great spiritual and practical plant as was needed for the growing needs of Atlanta and Georgia and also that a shortage of $25,000 developed yesterday in the raising of this sum, Mr. Candler added this amount to his previous subscription, making his total gift $75,000.

Three Men in a Bed.

With these importnt facts in mind, it is now time to hark back to an old Atlanta boarding house and also to the storyof the three men in a bed, which had such an important bearing in the successful launching of the Wesley Memorial enterprises yesterday at the hands of the college of bishops and other distinguished guests of national reputation.

Once upon a time, some thirty-two years ago, a young man arrived in Atlanta. He was a country boy straight from the "red old hills of Georgia" around Villa Rica. He brought with him as assets the clothes he wore, with enough underthings for changes to fill a rather small bundle. Having secured a position in the drug store of Dr. Howard on Peachtree street, this young man proceeded to go out upon a search for some Atlanta substitute for that good old home near Villa Rica, where it is quite probable that those two same goodly parents—whose sculptured busts now grace the entresol of the Candler building—were holding family prayers and carrying especially to the Great Mercy Seat that petition for a son's guidance such as only fathers and mothers can ever know. If prayers are ever answered, certainly those that are begotten of the mother-love and a father's care are given precedence and special attention by every recording angel assigned to that kind of work. Nor can it be possible that any one who knows Mr. Candler or any of his distinguished brothers, would dare gainsay the fact that the family prayers around the Villa Rica altar were answered.

And still that the answers to prayer are as inscrutable as some other things, if not more so, was proved in this very instance, for it would seem difficult for some to believe that such answers were immediate when they permitted of this same country boy searching through the streets of a strange city for such a pay-by-the-week stopping place as is occasionally misnamed by the sacred word of home.

This country boy, Mr. Candler, of course, was very particular as to his selection of a boarding house. Not that it was a private room with bath that he demanded nor perfect harmony in the color scheme of his single apartment nor the absolute absence of children, which is now so universal. There was only one requisite which this present owner of the Candler building, president of the board of trustees of Emory college and head of many other enterprises, both secular and sacred, insisted upon. This was a place to sleep, the usual three meals, if possible, and a hook to hang the few things in his bundle, his entire inventory at that time, and this entire combination for as much less than $15 per month as would permit of his sending some money back to the "folks" and some more to be placed to his credit in a bank until such time as he could have a bank of his own, such as now stands on Peachtree street.

There is little need to comment on the difficulties of such a mission. Peary and the elusive pole seem easy in comparison. But study, if you will, the moulding of that same chin which marks the man of today, those strong lines of determination and purpose which are ever present about his mouth when dissipated in the happiest of smiles—which fortunately occurs very often indeed and, perhaps, never happier than yesterday afternoon when the Wesley Memorial enterprises so dear to his heart, became an assured success.

It may be that other country boys have been on the same errand and who, after as much searching as the allegorical Christian, turned down from Houston or South Pryor or some other street into the valley of despair. But this particular country boy—and, happily for Atlanta, there have been many others—stuck to his job until the loss of much shoe leather and many hours brought ultimate victory.

Mecca of Country Boy.

To many, it will seem quite a coincidence that this Mecca of the country boy from near Villa Rica was located within less than half a square of where he sat yesterday afternoon in the Wesley Memorial tabernacle. No need for any comment. The facts alone are enough to prove what determination, backed by plenty of "sand" and ability, will do in the course of time.

So it was that at one of those palatial emporiums of the "Rooms to Let" brand located on Edgewood avenue, near Courtland street, that this incident connected with the building of the Wesley Memorial enterprises occurred.

Meaning no unpleasant inference—for Mr. Candler, in telling the essential facts of this story in a casual or even confidential way at a recent committee meeting, suggested none—the particular "Sally Brass" of this establishment finally agreed to provide the single hook at a price within the possibilities of the Villa-Rica-Atlantan, providing only that he agreed to sleep three in a bed. As this proposition appeared to be the only one which would permit of sending something home to the "folks," and also saving some on his own account against the uncertainties of the future, the wanderer accepted the terms. As the small bundle in lieu of a trunk or other baggage appeared too ephemeral and of the "fleeting" order, a deposit of the goodly realm of Villa Rica had to be forthcoming just one psychological moment before the introduction to the single hook and as little space in the exact center of an average-sized bed as the physiological heritage of this particular soldier of fortune would permit.

To this country boy who had been used to at least a width of one foot six inches in which to combat sleeplessness, mosquitoes et al., this economy seemed considerably cramped, and what with practicing the single position belonging to the anti-roll-over proposition for the alleged rest that is expected to follow the cares of a tired day, it was a very long time before this country boy and stranger could even make the acquaintance of Morpheus with whom he had previously lived on such good terms among the "red old hills." But more than all else, the terrible manner in which everyone demanded the pay-in-advance method of conducting business made the most awful impression on the stranger who found himself so suddenly launched into and up against the cold and mercenary corner of the world, which seems to increase in cruelty and selfishness according to the population of small or metropolitan cities.

And it was on this very night, according to the story told the other day in a committee meeting, that Mr. Candler decided that if he ever should be fortunate, the poor country boy or girl face to face with the strange ways and practices of a city should not be forgotten, but be among the very first to be remembered. What followed on that same first eventful night clinched his previous purpose, and if this particular writer's opinion counts for anything, it is doubtful if any strange country boy or country girl who will in the near future make his or her home in the dormitories, one of the most important features of the Wesley Memorial enterprises, will be any happier than this same ex-country boy who yesterday pledged $75,000 for the consummation of his old purpose, appeared to be.

Narrative of Last Week.

According to Mr. Candler's short narrative of last week, after several hours' practice of the petrified position in the center of the bed, he had apparently but just dozed off into slumberland with its favorite setting of home and other objects of a distinct Villa Rica local coloring, for dremicity is a powerful and rapid common carrier, with the very cheapest of mileage rates for carrying one to just where one most wants to be at waking-up time, when he was roughly interrupted from his happy trip by the two young men who had rented exhibits or sections A and C of the bed in which the Villa Rican voyager had been so rudely awakened.

The gentlemen in question insisted that some mistake had been made. It was after midnight when they arrived—the present 10 o'clock rule not being among the city ordinances of that period—and they insisted on correcting the landlady's error in a manner more effective than pleasant. They demanded that the country boy show his lease of section B in the bed he occupied, and then proceeded to get athletically humorous.

No need to go into details. Most every man has never been able to forget the homesickness of that first night away from the folks in spite of much effort and the horrors of nostalgia defy description even more than mal de mer. As for the young gentleman from Villa Rica, as yet not even convalescing from an almost fatal attack of this same nostalgia, he knew not how to combat this new type of pugilistic playfulness, and when they had finished, was at least relieved, and glad of the privilege to follow their suggestion of hanging himself with his little bundle on the single hook belonging to section B of the bed and exchange his petrified position for that of a living perpendicular.

The next night, in spite of his payment in advance, he secured the consent of his employer, and with his bundle for a pillow, gladly exchanged his former section B at the figuratively speaking "brasses" where he had not so much as enjoyed the friendship of a diminutive "marchioness," and sought out the softest side of the tenderest plank of the counter in the drug store in which he worked.

Another thing, in this same little bundle he brought with him from Villa Rica a letter of introduction to Rev. Clement A. Evans, then pastor of the Trinity Methodist church. But when the first Sunday in Atlanta rolled round he had learned so much of the difference in manners, methods and customs then in vogue between Atlanta and Villa Rica, that he took a second look at the frayed cuffs and the Villa Rica cut of his trousers and waistcoat and, perhaps fearing the bright brand of humor which seemed to so entertain other Atlantans at his expense, "cut" church for the first Sunday in his life and spent, in all probability, the worst Sunday in his experience seesawing with longings to return to Villa Rica on the one hand and determining to "stick it out" on the other, and to add to the very refinement of cruelty, wrote cheerful letters to the homefolks as every young man feels in duty bound either to convey the idea that they are making a tremendous success or trying to avoid suspicion as to the terrible homesickness which really holds them in its python-like grasp that just will squeeze the water from the eyes of the strongest and bravest when it is quite dark and a retreat is necessary now and then in the struggle with happy memories, self-respect and that choice collection of other things belonging only to a stranger in a strange land.

Of course, these things come to an end with victory for those who surmount obstacles rather than evade them. There were no frayed edges to Mr. Candler's cuffs yesterday, nor was there any suspicion of a Villa Rica cut to the simple but substantial suit he wore. And right on the platform before him was that grand old Georgian, General Clement A. Evans, to whom that delayed letter of introduction had been delivered years and years ago.

Institutional Church Work.

As for the expression of Mr. Candler's face it was not a business-like expression at all. And when now and then one of the bishops spoke of the great needs of an institutional church work in Atlanta such as would provide the pleasantest kind of environments and associations for the country boys and girls from all parts of Georgia, why his expression suggested that he was alone with his memories ever and ever so far away, much farther than Villa Rica, or it may be that it was only half a block below on Edgewood avenue, and the distance was the distance of time rather than space.

But when finally the entire sum of $200,000 was raised, with almost half the amount due, at least in part, to the memory of Section B and a single hook in an Edgewood boarding house, the expression of Mr. Candler's face without exaggeration, was about as near the beatific as it is possible for the face of a business man just passed fifty years of age to become in the days of this modern and strenuous present. Just back of him another brother, Judge Candler, shared in the happiness and enthusiasm that swept across the "sea of upturned faces" that filled Wesley Tabernacle. And just in front of him, still another brother, Bishop Candler, seated on the rostrum, fairly beamed with the glad tidings that meant the accomplishment of a great need in the conference of which he was the appointed head.

Enthusiasm and happiness was quite the regulation thing at the close of this great mass meeting, and even a wooden Indian must have been infected with the generous contagion.

But in the mind of at least one Atlantan, of all those who joined in the doxology of thankfulness, no one sang more earnestly no more sincerely than did this one-time country boy from Villa Rica, who was at last realizing the ambition of an anti-boarding house Atlanta for strangers, an ambition that was born years and years ago in a crowded room not half a block away together with the fulfillment and answer to those parents' prayers sent up from a family altar near Villa Rica.

NEW YORK CAR BARNS BURNED.

Several Firemen Were Badly Burned—Loss Over $200,000.

New York, June 16.—Fire tonight destroyed the car barns of the New York City Railway Company, situated in Madison avenue between Eighty-fifth and Eighty-sixth streets. A number of nearby residences were damaged. The loss will exceed $200,000.

Thirty electric automobiles and several cars which were in the building were destroyed. The books and records of the company were lost. Several firemen were badly bruised.

A UNIVERSAL FOOD Following Nature's Footsteps.

"I have a boy 2 years old, weighing forty pounds, and in perfect health, who has been raised on Grape-Nuts and milk.

"This is an ideal food and evidently furnishes the elements necessary for a baby as well as for adults. We have used Grape-Nuts in large quantities, and greatly to our advantage."

One advantage about Grape-Nuts Food is that it is pre-digested in the process of manufacture; that is, the starch contained in the wheat and barley is transformed into grape-sugar by exactly the same method as this process is carried out in the human body, that is, by the use of moisture and long exposure to moderate warmth, which grows the diastase in the grains and makes the remarkable change from starch to grape-sugar.

Therefore, the most delicate stomach can handle Grape-Nuts, and the food is quickly absorbed into the blood and tissue, certain parts of it going directly to building and nourishing the brain and nerve centers. "There's a Reason."

$16,000 GIVEN TO BROUGHTON

Large Donations Announced by Baptist Tabernacle Leader.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Live Oak, Fla., Baptist church.... ....$1,000
A friend—for Hospital.. ..$5,000
A friend—for Girls' Dormitory.... ....$5,000

Note: The two persons who gave $5,000 each are working upon another person for a similar gift and expect to get it. All live away from Atlanta.

When seen by a representative of The Constitution yesterday Dr. Len G. Broughton was all smiles and good humor. He had just returned from a most successful trip to Live Oak, Fla., and the people there had been so carried away with him and his work that they gave him $1,000 for his institutional church—just forced him to take it.

Dr. Broughton also made two announcements which were in the nature of an encouraging surprise to Tabernacle workers and supporters. Two friends who refused to have their names published, have given $5,000 each and they are working on a third party from whom they expect confidently to get an additional $5,000. None of these parties are local.

One of the $5,000 given was for the dormitory for working girls which Dr. Broughton has been running for many years. Such an institution was an unheard of feature of church work in the south until Dr. Broughton a few years ago introduced it as a part of his work.

A friend also has given $5,000 for the endowment of a charity room at the Tabernacle hospital. The money is turned over to a committee who are to invest it and use the income from it towards the making of a room forever supported for free charity patients.

Building Committee at Work.

The building committee, of which Dr. Broughton is the general chairman, but which is divided into two divisions, with a head for each, has actually begun work and the future now looms roseate.

These committees as just named are:

CONSTRUCTION COMMITTEE: Dr. Joseph Broughton, J. S. Price, S. C. Calloway, J. H. Jennings, A. M. Smith, W. T. Winn, J. B. Lee, J. W. Boone, W. J. Sloan, W. C. Smith, C. W. Hatcher, J. A. Riley.

FINANCE COMMITTEE: E. C. Calloway, chairman; H. A. Etheridge, treasurer; R. N. Fickett, Sr., Dr. Frank Edmondson, J. W. Awtry, J. H. Howe, A. K. Hawkes, Mrs. Walter H. Wiggs.

Shot at Negro Meeting.

Augusta, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—West Boston, a negro from Johnson, S. C., was brought to the Lamar hospital tonight suffering from a bullet wound in the abdomen which will probably prove fatal. It is stated that he was shot by Mike Squash, another negro, during the progress of a religious meeting on the outskirts of Johnston. Boston says he previously had some trouble with Mike Squash's brother, and that Mike simply walked by him and "bored" him with a slug from a .38-caliber revolver.

Sans Souci II Won Grand Prize.

Paris, June 16.—Edmond de Rothchilds' Sans Souci II today won the grand prix de Paris, which was run under the most favorable conditions. There was a brilliant assembly of spectators, including the king and queen of Denmark and President Fallieres.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

Atlanta 7, Shreveport 4.
Birmingham 3, New Orleans 0—First Game.
Birmingham 4, New Orleans 1—Second Game.
Memphis 3, Montgomery 2.

Shreveport, La., June 16.—(Special.)—Prince Gaskill was handed several kinds of packages by the umpire here this afternoon and as a result the little Texan threw up the sponge in the fifth round, when two were out and the score was 5 to 2 in favor of the Crackers.

Hickman succeeded him and did good work for the balance of the game. Ford worked for Billy Smith and did some very clever pitching, his two best rounds being the second and third, when he struck out six Pirates, although he walked one in each frame.

The visitors took a liking to Gaskill's delivery early in the proceedings. Becker and Winters each drove out two two-baggers and Becker scored.

Three bases on balls made prospects excellent for another score, but Warrender pulled down Castro's long fly into right field.

Rudderham gave Gaskill much the worst of it in this inning, but it was in the fourth that his work was particularly raw. Castro and Winters were each given bases on balls after two strikes had been registered, and in Castro's case the batter started for the bench instead of first, evidently thinking he was out.

The Crackers added two more scores to their credit on hits by Fox and Dyer, followed by the two gifts and a hit batsman.

Jordan started the fifth with a safe bingle. Benson's error gave Paskert life, and Fox placed a clever sacrifice that advanced both runners. Castro's single assisted in the scoring.

Gaskill quit at this period. He couldn't stand the rank unfairness of the indicator holder, and prospects did not look good for any improvement in the conditions.

Hickman retired the Crackers in one, two three order in the sixth, but in the seventh a hit by Fox and Castro's three-bagger added another run.

The final score came in the eighth, following a base on balls to Winters, Benson's error and a hit by Smith.

Mum Warrender made the circuit for the pirates in the opening mix up on an error by Castro, followed by Benson's sacrifice and two passed balls by Sid Smith.

Massing drove out a terrific two-base drive, but fast fielding by the Crackers kept him from going further.

Husk King walked in the fourth and scored on Fisher's three-bagger, while Gaskill's clean single brought in the Pirate manager.

Smith's bunch played a fast game. In double plays by Castro, Winters and Fox retired the side.

ONE MORE WEEK LEFT ON ROAD

Half of Trip Passed in Grand Style.

Two Strong Contenders Are on the Week's Bill in New Orleans and Memphis, but the Cracker Slabmen Are Going Good for Fair.

The Crackers have endured half of that road trip, and a glance at the standing of the clubs will show that they haven't done badly since pulling away from Ponce de Leon. Neither have they worked out a medium-sized performance, but on the other hand covered themselves with glory by holding around the top when in the land of the enemy.

The week will end the tour, or rather Sunday will, and the bunch are up against two of the strongest teams of the west during the remainder of the stay in that territory. While New Orleans may not be considered so by many, what they did to us in that series here leaves the impression that there is something to Frank's bunch.

Anyway, it is a sure thing that Memphis will not be any easily-disposed-of contender, to judge from the manner in which the team has been conducting itself up to date.

However, there is all confidence to be placed in the Crackers while they are attacking the strongholds of Frank and Babb, and it's not a bad guess to dope them out as reaching home Monday as the bell bunch of select and cultured company.

It is an excellent chance to get revenge for the things Frank did us at home, and as the pitchers are all going good now, such an occurrence would not at all be out of the natural order of events.

Memphis, too, should be taken in grand style.

On Monday of the home-coming, Nashville opens, and after the series the team goes away for a six-game trip with the easterners before settling down for the long stay at Ponce de Leon in July.

TEAM WITH GREAT SEASON RECORD

COLUMBUS HIGH SCHOOL TEAM.

Columbus, Ga., June 16.—(Special.)—The baseball team of the Columbus High school has made a splendid record this season, having been defeated by only one aggregation, and that the crack team of Gordon institute at Barnesville. The team was organized a comparatively short while ago and its season this year was confined to a few weeks' playing. Carl Loewenherz is business manager of the team, which is composed of hardy young athletes of this city, members of the prominent families.

PROGRAM OF BOAT RACES

Seven Colleges Are Entered for Events on the Hudson River.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 16.—The intercollegiate boat races are to be held on the four-mile stretch of the Hudson river known as the Poughkeepsie course on Wednesday, June 26. Eight-oared crews representing seven colleges are entered in the university race, this principal event, and they are all here now, forming what is probably the largest gathering of college oarsmen in the history of rowing in this country.

Includink the crews made up of substitutes, there are fourteen eights and seven fours engaged in daily practice. They row between 10 and 12 a. m. and 5 and 7 p. m., their work being watched with keen interest by men from the various colleges, who follow in launches or observe the boats from shore.

The regatta is conducted by the Intercollegiate Rowing association, composed of Cornell, Columbia and Pennsylvania, which held its first race here in 1895, and the other four colleges take part on invitation of the association. The following program has been arranged for the regatta:

4 p. m.—Two-mile race for university fours, Syracuse, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Columbia, Cornell.

4:45 p. m.—Two-mile race for freshmen eights, Cornell, Wisconsin, Syracuse, Pennsylvania, Columbia.

Order of the Crews.

The order in which the crews are named indicates the courses drawn in each race, beginning from the west shore.

Annapolis is the only newcomer this year, but the entrance of the naval cadets puts a new element into the big race and increases the interest in the regatta.

Columbia has been here two weeks and has put in the time so profitably that James Rice, the coach, says that the crews have made satisfactory improvements.

Cornell, after a week's rowing here, had a two-mile race yesterday, in which the freshmen defeated the university crew by three lengths, thereby seeming to justify the statement made by Coach Courtney on leaving Ithaca that the crew is much slower than last year and not up to the Cornell standard.

Pennsylvania has a good looking crew, but Ellis Ward, the coach, has no high hopes, pointing out that he has been able to retain only three of last year's strong eight.

Syracuse has practically a new crew, Andrews being the only one left from last year's squad, but with young Jim Ten Eyck at the stroke oar, the boat is second to none on the river in its appearance of speed.

The Badgers, who are being trained by Edward Ten Eyck, son of the Syracuse coach, show excellent form and their boat seems to move rapidly.

In the Georgetown boat the four stern men are the same as last year, the other four being new.

GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP OF ENGLAND BEGINS

NEW YORK, June 16.—Starting tomorrow over the Hoy Lake links, near Liverpool, competition for the open golf championship of Great Britain will begin. Alex Smith, the American open champion, will represent the United States in the tournament. To win Smith will be forced to defeat the highest class of professional golfers in Scotland and England. The rules of the tournament call for seventy-two holes at medal play, thirty-six holes being played daily. Smith sailed for Europe some time ago and reports received here concerning his play say that he will prove a dangerous competitor.

The American open golf championship will start at Philadelphia next Thursday. The "open" always has been an easy event for the professionals, but this year, with Smith absent, the hopes of the amateurs are centered on Jerome in the travers, the metropolitan and New Jersey state championship.

The annual regatta of the New York Yacht Club will be held Thursday, and that of the Sewanhaka-Corinthian Club Friday.

Ten little jib and main-sail yachts of the so-called Sonder class, a type made notable by the races last year for the Roosevelt cup, are assembled in Marble Head harbar, and on Tuesday will begin a series of races for the honor of representing this country in Kiel in August for the second international contest between Germany and America, for a trophy offered by Emperor William.

The contenders this year, three of which will be selected to go to Germany, are: Auk, owned by A. H. Rollin, Corinthian Yacht Club; the Bonedri, owned by George Abbott, Eastern Yacht Club; Cheewink VIII, owned by F. G. Macomber, Jr., Corinthian Yacht Club; Corinthian, owned by B. C. Tower, Corinthian Yacht Club; Marblehead, owned by W. H. Joyce and Sumner H. Foster, Boston Yacht Club; Marla, owned by Max and R. L. Agassiz; Sally VIII, owned by A. P. Loring, Boston Yacht Club; Spokane I and Spokane II, owned by Vice Commodore F. Lewis Clarke, of the Eastern Yacht Club, and the Windrim Kid, owned by George Lee, of the Eastern Yacht Club. The Chwink VIII, Cironthian, Marblehead, Marla and Spokane II are the new boats in the fleet.

BOB SPADE NOW LEADS THE TEAM IN HITTING

INCLUDING Saturday's game the hitting average of the Atlanta team is .240, which is a goodly increase over the .225 which represented the team's batting this time a week ago. Bob Spade tops off the list this week with .333, and as he has played in twenty-five games he shows that he is there when it comes to finding them and deserves every honor that goes with the bunch's leading hitter.

Pork Scraps for Poultry.

Pork scraps are relished by poultry, but are not generally considered as satisfactory as beef scrap. However, they analyze about the same, except that the pork scrap contains rather more fat. Pork cracklings and beef cracklings should have about the same feeding value. They are not as rich in protein as prepared scrap, but can be used as a substitute for a scrap with quite satisfactory results.

SUBURBAN RUN NEXT THURSDAY

Eighteen Starters Are Slated to Compete in Race.

Superman Looks Good, and Is Strongly Touted to Win—Electioneer and Montgomery Are Also Carrying Good Deal of Money of the Wise Ones.

New York, June 16.—Over the beautiful course at Sheepshead Bay next Thursday will be run the Suburban, one of the greatest of American turf fixtures. It is a handicap for 3-year-olds and upward 1¼ miles, for a purse guaranteed at $20,000, and a more classy field of horses than this year's has never been entered for the event. Of the eighty-four nominated, it is probable that not more than eighteen or twenty will start, and though the race has but once been won by a 3-year-old, in 1903, by Africander, the entrants in this division this year seem to hold it secure if reckonings, based on past performances, count for anything.

Standing out prominently in the 3-year-old divison are James R. Keene's Brooklyn Handicap winner, Superman; Electioneer, who won the Futurity last year and this year ran Peter Pan a good race in the Standard stakes; Montgomery, the southern horse that has shown remarkable speed and gameness in all his races; Salvidere, last year's champion 2-year-old, and Veil, Sewell, Fountainbleau and Frank Gill. Flip Flap, Dandelion, Dr. Gardner, Blandy, Beacon Light, Okenite, Dishabille, Accountant, Oxford, Cottontown, Comedienne, Ironsides and Running Water are the leaders among the older horses.

Chief among the athletic events of the week will be the track and field championships to be held at the Jamestown exposition Saturday. A great gathering of athletes is assured and keen competition is expected. The University of Pennsylvania, Princeton, Harvard and Yale all have teams entered for the various contests.

SPORTING BREVITIES

These other people seem to think that Rube Zeller is due to win his every game. Says The Montgomery Advertiser:

"Quite a jolt Rube Zeller and Billy Smith received in Shreveport yesterday. Something must have gone wrong with the 'Wizard's' combination as the Pirates got eight whacks off him while only six hits so widely scattered as to be harmless were made off Gaskill, who was pounded for keeps at Capitol Heights."

How about Ralph Savidge? This is what the fans are asking this season. First with Savannah, then to Charleston, and now with Jacksonville, where he has made one of the best pitchers in the league. Now Manager Matthews and the Charleston stockholders are sorry because they traded him for Willis, who was released some time ago and was signed by Savannah. Savidge will probably lead the pitchers when the season closes. He is the only pitcher that has been in this league since it started.—Savannah Press.

It's funny what changes of berth do sometimes.

Noah Henline, who was turned over to Montgomery by Charley Babb, now leads his team in hitting.

Chandler, who was released by the Macon management at the opening of the season, has again been signed by Perry Lipe. Chandler will work as a utility catcher until Jack Robinson is back in the game. Harnish, who is now working behind the bat for Macon, is putting up an excellent game of ball and throwing bases in great style. Robinson, who had one of his fingers broken in a game last week, is still on the bench, and will likely remain

Water Needles.

So penetrating is water at high pressure that only special qualities of cast iron will be tight against it. In the early days of the dydraulic jack it was no uncommon thing to see the water issuing like a fine needle through the metal, and the water needle would penetrate the unwary finger just as readily as a steel one.

"THE DEVIL IN THE HOME," DR. BROUGHTON'S SUBJECT

DR. BROUGHTON preached the fifth Sunday night serman in his series on the "Home Talks of Jesus." His subject was, "The Home with the Devil in It." His text was: Matthew xv, 22: "My daughter is grievously vexed with a devil."

"Christ had just left the great crowd where He severely rebuked the scribes and pharisees for their hypocrisy, and had come over into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, where a woman of Canaan, heart-broken and discouraged, consulted Him with regard to her daughter. The purpose and the manner of her coming is very suggestive.

"Let it be remembered that she is a mother, troubled about the condition of her daughter. How many mothers like her today! Scarcely a week or even a day passes that I do not in one way or another come across just such a mother troubled about her daughter, or, it may be her son.

"You who are not parents can never appreciate the deep solicitous interest that they have for the welfare of their children. Especially is this true when they see signs of the work of the evil one in them. It means everything to them. Their whole hearts and lives, if they are true parents, are wrapped up in the child. They never get over those fond dreams of babyhood; the day when the brightest hopes and aspirations centered in the little cuddling, cooing babe, is constantly before them. No wonder that they are over anxious when they see that sin and defilement has begun its work upon the life that they love as they love nothing else under the sun.

The Mother Heart.

"I wish I could impress this upon every mother's child in this world. Surely it would prevent many a heartache. It would give many a tired mother's brain a rest and peace. Think of it, young folks. You have no right to bring any more anxiety than possible to the one who has sacrificed everything for you. Strive to gladden her heart rather than to sadden it. Let her know that your ambition is to fulfill every longing that she has for you and your life. Try to please her by making of yourself the very best man or woman that you can possibly make. Nothing will comfort her in her old age more than to look at your life of success and think of you as you once were, her little darling babe, now towering with head crowned and life blessed, a monument to her care and her prayers.

"This mother came to Jesus with a sad heart. It was well that she came to Jesus. He is the only one who can help in such an extremity. If more of our mothers would realize this, it would be much better for them and for their children.

"Some time ago a mother came to me, declaring that she could not control her daughter, and she wanted to get her into some kind of a reformatory. I asked her if she had ever gone directly to Jesus and asked Him to save her daughter and overcome in her the tendencies to evil, and she said, 'No, I cannot go to Jesus for my daughter because I have never gone to him for myself. Jesus does not know me.' 'Well,' said I, 'do you not think it is best to have an acquaintance with Jesus now, right here where we are? You give yourself to Him and take Him as your friend, and as your Lord and Savior, and then you begin to talk to Him about your daughter; talk to Him definitely; talk to Him in earnest; talk to Him in such a way as to enlist His interest, and let Him see that you are sincere; that you are willing to serve Him yourself; and I believe He will direct you about your daughter. It may be best to send her to a reformatory, but He will tell you about that and He will prepare the way, if only you yourself will become acquainted with Him.'

"Mother, if you are troubled today about your child, do not fail to learn a lesson from this woman, your sister in trouble, about her child. Come to Jesus with your cares. Tell Him all your troubles. His loving invitation is:

"'Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.'

"This is the invitation that Jesus sends out to every troubled, burdened heart in this world. Oh, that we could hear Him as He makes the call. Oh, that we could get a glimpse of His face as He invites us, so tender, kind and gentle is He in giving it. I feel quite sure that it would take away from us any fear in coming, if we could only see Him as He speaks these tender words.

The Devil Vexed Daughter.

"This woman came with an honest confession. 'Lord, my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil.' That is to say, 'My daughter has the devil in her.' So far as we know she never referred to a single merit or good grace that her daughter possessed. It may be that she was entirely devoid of goodness, but I do not think so. Every devil possessed soul has some element of goodness. I have no doubt this girl had some good traits of character; most mothers would have expatiated on whatever goodness she possessed before saying anything about her being possessed with a devil. It is just like a mother to speak of every good trait in her child. Indeed, it is like them to see only the good. I am afraid that there is where one trouble lies in training children.

"This mother never said anything about her daughter's attainments, whether she was a musician, versed in literature, up in matters of etiquette, beautiful in figure, elegant in manners, or any of these things; she seemed for the time to ignore everything but the fact that her daughter was possessed with a devil.

"This was right. The Lord wants frankness when He comes to dealing with His people. He wants no flattering words of introduction; all He wants is an honest, sincere heart, and that He is always ready to bless.

"Just what this devil that possessed her daughter was, we are not told. It may have been the devil of selfishness; certain it is that the devil ofttimes assumes this form, and many a man and woman today is possessed by him. Selfishness! I do not know a more subtle form of devil possession. I do not know of one that in the end causes more unhappiness. Selfishness is the very quintessence of sin. It blinded the eyes of Judas Iscariot and caused him to betray his Lord. It has been the thing that has caused the wreck of more lives than any other one thing that I know about. Jesus Himself recognized it as the mainspring of ungodliness when He said, 'If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow Me.'

"Deny himself! That is a very different thing from self-denial, about which we hear so much today. Self-denial is asceticism. It is a punishment of one's self, either in a direct or indirect way.

The Poor, Deluded Ascetic.

"I once saw a good illustration of that in St. Mark's cathedral in Venice. A poor, ragged, hideous looking man came in and knelt before an altar in that famous old cathedral, and began to recite his Latin prayer, the meaning of which he knew no more about than I did. He remained there in that attitude, saying meaningless prayers for more than an hour. I watched him a while and then went to some other part of the building. When I came back he was still there. The tears had begun to rain down his rough, dirty cheeks. I became very much interested in him. Finally I saw him take a lancet from his pocket and prick his skin until the blood spurted. I could not stand any more. I went to him and endeavored to speak to him, but could not. All that I could do was to point to the crucifix over the taltar, as much as to say, 'He shed His blood, and there is no need for you to shed yours.' But I was forced out by an officer for interferring with a man at worship.

"I do not know what effect my effort had, but this I do know: that man was deluded. Who was responsible for it I cannot say, but he was deluded. What he needed was to hear Jesus say, 'If any man will come after me, let him deny himself.' That was the thing that he had not done. He was punishing self, but not denying it. There was something that his will was holding on to. He had not obtained the consent of his will to surrender at the feet of Jesus. That is the only place and the only way to get rid of self.

The Devil of Pleasure.

"The devil in this daughter might have been pleasure seeking. It is so with many people that I know. Indeed, it is so with many who claim to know the better way.

"God wants us to have pleasure. Nothing delights His Father heart more than to see His children bright and happy. It could not be otherwise. He is our Father, and no father can be happy to see his children morose and sad. But God the Father wants His children to have pleasure that is in keeping with the law of their spiritual life.

"Man is made up of a trinity of parts; body, soul and spirit, and God wants these three to be properly related to each other. He is not satisfied to see any one part developed at the expense of the other, and a uniform development along this line is happiness.

"The man or woman who lives simply for pleasure never is gratified. Likewise the man or woman who lives only for the spirit or for the soul is never happy. It takes all three o these parts to make perfect happiness; the body, soul and spirit; each must have its proper attention and its due chance at developemnt and exercise if there is to be anything like a happiness that satisfies.

"Jesus is the only one who can properly relate these three parts. He knows the need of each and He is the Master of each. He is just as much the Master of the body as He is of the soul and spirit. He is just as much interested in our bodily exercise and sports in a rightful way as He is in our spiritual or intellectual development. Let this not be forgotten, otherwise we will deny Him His rightful place.

Bad Habits.

"The devil in this girl may have been in the form of some bad habit; certainly many of us are thus possessed. It is an easy thing to form a hurtful habit. Indeed, it is very easy to form a habit, whether good or bad. Man is that much of an animal. He easily repeats himself. I have heard of a young man and a young woman who each formed a habit of lying on the front side of the bed. They could not sleep in any other position. They married, and the first night of their married life they had a controversy about that side of the bed. This controversy lasted, until they were finally forced to apply for a divorce, and the ground for the divorce was incompatibility.

"This may seem ridiculous, and it most assuredly is, but it is not any more ridiculous than many of the habits that we ourselves form.

"Young people especially should be very careful about their habits, for as they grow older they become more and more fixed in them, and if the habits are bad they will more and more destroy their powers for good.

"No one knows just what form the devil in this mother's daughter assumed. It is enough to know that she was devil possessed. Her whole body, soul and spirit was dominated by evil to such an extent as to break the heart of her mother and cause her to come to Jesus.

The Way of Relief.

"The manner of her coming is perhaps more interesting than the purpose she had. She came without much conscious ground for hope. She was a Gentile; a heathen woman. The Jews had no fellowship with such people. They regarded them as outcasts.

"How she came to know about Jesus we are not told. Doubtless she had heard of His good work in other parts of the country, of His work of healing and the comfort that He had bestowed upon many heart-broken ones. At any rate, she had heard something of Him, enough to cause her to seek Him out and lay before Him her distressed condition.

"She came determined to take no refusal. The disciples tried to discourage her. They came and besought Him saying, 'Send her away, for she crieth after us.' Poor, blinded disciples! How little they knew of the real mission of Jesus to this old sin-cursed world. How little they knew about their own work! They doubtless felt that they had been taken along as a sort of body-guard, and a poor lot they were at that, for when Jesus needed them there was not one of them that would watch with Him. Perhaps they thought that their place was to keep order and to take care of the dignity of the occasion.

"I know that it is true that our office bearers in the church are often in just such ignorance about their real place. They seem to think that it is their duty simply to overlook the situation and see that everything goes off in proper form. The real meaning of the disciples does not grip them. They have no official place in God's kingdom unless it is aggressive. The warfare that they are engaged in is not one of dignity and form simply. It is one of aggressiveness. The office bearer is the general in the army, who stays, not behind the army, but in the forefront, saying always:

"'Onward, Christian soldieers, marching as to war,
'With the cross of Jesus going on before.'

"Their business is to carry the standard in the forefront and never rest satisfied unless something is doing.

The Time of Testing.

"These disciples objected to her disturbing the peace and dignity of the occasion. 'She crieth after us.' Poor men! How much they remind me of the average church, especially when it gets a little bit up in the world. About the only place that the liberty of the spirit is recognized at all is in the church of the poor. It is a shame that it is so, but we might as well face the fact.

"'She crieth after us!' What if she does? Let her cry. Her poor broken heart, it is enough to cause her to break over formalities. Let her cry. She is a mother with a daughter that is grievously vexed with a devil. It is enough to make angels weep and heaven itself sad.

"And Jesus Himself seemed at first to discourage her. He said, 'I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel.' He said this in order to test her. She was not of Israel, but Jesus knew what He would do at the last. And she stood the test, for she came and worshipped Him, saying, 'Lord, help me.'

"Then He submitted another test, more severe. He said, 'It is not meet to take the children's bread and cast it to dogs.' Ah, this test, how many of us would stand it? Why, she is compared to a dog. Our sensitive spirits would resent such an implication, though it did come from Jesus. We cannot stand the slightest test. We falter aand fail when we have every encouragement, but she, a heathen woman, who knew very little about Jesus, was willing to be thus tested in the severest way. 'Truth, Lord, yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from the master's table.' Such humility! Willing to be anything. Coming with the spirit that says, 'Never mind about me. Give me any place or no place, but my heart is breaking over my daughter. Help me, Lord, in this hour of my need.'

Victory Through Christ.

Then hear the words of Jesus, 'Oh, woman, great is thy faith. Be it unto thee even as thou wilt.' And her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

"What a triumph! This was what Jesus intended to do at the first, for he saw deep down in her heart all the virtues that appealed to Him. He saw her broken heart. He saw how she was torn and lacerated by the condition of her daughter. He saw her determined never to leave Him until she got the thing desired; until her daughter was saved and made whole. He saw her humility; He saw that she was willing to do anything, or to be anything. He saw her faith; that though she was a heathen woman, she had learned enough about Him to believe in Him and to trust Him; and seeing these things, Jesus always stands ready to help.

"Oh, mother! Are you troubled today? Is there in your heart a load that you cannot carry any longer? Have you reached your limit in burden bearing? If so, I point you to Jesus. Here He stands ready today with the same heart of love and sympathy; knowing just as He knew then the secret thoughts of men. He has the same willingness and the same power to help. Bring your cares to Him. Lay them at His feet. Make up your mind not to take no for an answer. Hold on to Him. Your faith may be very little, but as sure as you hold on, the day of victory will come, and you will hear Him say, as He said to this woman, 'Great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt.'

All Burdens Wanted.

"Nor would I limit this invitation to mothers. Every soul weighted down with care has the same right that she had. Jesus will take our burdens away. He wants to defeat the devil, no difference what form he assumes, no difference in whose life he operates. It is the purpose of Jesus to defeat the devil.

"Two thousand years ago this battle began, and for all this time the warfare has been going on, and never has there been a single time when the devil got the victory. Christ is equal to every emergency. There is no trouble that He is not able to subdue. There is no devil that He cannot cast out. Oh, man and woman, weak and trembling as you are, do not fear to trust Him.

"Are you possessed with the devil of selfishness? Do you feel the self life controlling you? Then beware, for once you yield submissively to it, there is absolutely no limit to its demands. Come to Jesus. Let Him cast the devil out, and give you that spirit which characterized Him when He gave Himself for the world.

"Are you bent on pleasure? Has it gripped you more and more as you have grown older? Do you feel today its master hand as you never felt it before? Then I warn you of its danger. I have seen good men and women, while bending over the awful precipice, reaching for the flowers of pleasure, lose their grip and plunge into despair. Pleasure is not to be obtained in that way. The only way that pleasure can be pleasure is when it is sought unselfishly. Jesus is able to cure you of your burning passion for the pleasure of this world.

"Are you possessed with the demon of bad habits? Do they haunt you? Do they cause you to shudder when alone? Then think of the future. Oh, God pity you, for if such is true there will be no more easy conscience for you. Day and night they will haunt you so that life will more and more become a hell. Bring your bad habits to Jesus. Never mind what they are. He is the master of the demon of bad habits. It is just as easy for Him to break the habit of drink or any other habit, however strong it may be, as it is for Him to do the simplest thing that we see Him doing in the daily life.

"Come to Jesus. Come with every care and every condition. Come with confidence, knowing that He is willing and able to do that which is best for time and eternity."

Lots of men, in buying clothes, are not half particular enough about quality; they'll buy almost anything that looks stylish, and fits; especially if the price is low.

It's the wrong way to buy clothes. We hope you don't buy yours that way. The right way is to be sure first of the quality you're getting. "Is it all-wool? Is it well-tailored?" A price means nothing unless you know what you're getting for it.

In this store we want you to know what you're getting for your money; we're not afraid to tell you, either. Ask if the goods are all-wool; ask if they're tailored right; ask about style, wear; try the clothes on.

But if you see the Hart, Schaffner & Marx or Rogers, Peet & Co. label in the clothes, just consider it an answer to your questions; all-wool; clean, honest tailoring; correct style, best wear. The price will be right.

Jacobs' Prescriptions

There is more to the proper filling of a prescription than is apparent at first glance. The success of the physician, the health, the very life of the patient is dependent upon the care and judgment of the compounder, and the quality of the material he uses.

Accuracy is everything, and the pharmaceutical chemist must give his entire mind and thought to this one particular line, if he is to give the best that is in him.

Jacobs' Prescription Department

has prepared for this contingency, and in this department maintains four expert pharmacists who devote their entire time to the filling of prescriptions. They have no other duty, and no other thought, and their experience, coupled with the use of the most complete laboratory of drugs and chemicals in the United States, supervised by the same executives whose care has been the cause of our success, assures both physician and patient the

FARM AND INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES ON THE SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY.

SOAPSTONE DEPOSITS: Embracing approximately forty acres, within thirty-eight miles of Atlanta and very conveniently located with reference to transportation facilities. These deposits will yield good size blocks or slabs. The material saws easily, which insures minimum quarry expense. Samples can be seen at our offices.

MICA DEPOSIT: Embracing about twenty acres. The indications are exceptionally good, but it would be necessary to make some additional openings before the full extent and value of the deposits can be determined. Property is nicely located for shipping. The enormous demand for this material and the high prices prevailing for both the sheet and scrap should make this opportunity very inviting.

LOCATION FOR PHYSICIAN: In a middle Georgia town, the only physician and surgeon, on account of age, desires to retire from a practice which has required many years to build up. His home consists of eighty acres of fine land, with an eight-room two-story residence, barn, stables, etc. The residence is practically new. Titles perfect. Price $2,500, with reasonable terms.

LOCATION FOR FARMER AND FRUIT GROWER: 265 acres, 1 1-2 miles from our main line, and same distance from a good town. 40 acres of beautiful valley land. 140 acres in cultivation, balance pasture and timber. 2,000 peach trees, 100 pears, and other fruit. A first-class nine-room two-story dwelling, three tenant houses, barn, store house, etc. Price $20 per acre.

WE WANT TIMBER: A tract of sweet gum or red gum, on or within three miles of our line, for a crate and box manufacturer, who would establish a very large plant, employing high-class labor. This proposition should therefore interest any community on the Seaboard where the materials can be secured. For additional information concerning these or other profitable opportunities for investment, and for literature and property lists, call on or address Seaboard Industrial Agency.

THE BEST TRACT OF TIMBER BETWEEN ATLANTA AND BIRMINGHAM IS FOR SALE.

ONE THOUSAND, two hundred acres of virgin pine and hardwood. Pine predominates, but there is also a magnificent growth of white oak and poplar, with a sprinkling of fine hickory. The timber is very long bodied, and averages well in diameter. On a little more than one acre, we counted 280 large pine trees which would easily cut 250,000 feet. The property will average between six and seven thousand feet to the acre, plus 500,000 oak crossties. The land is perfectly level, and after timber is removed will make one of the best stock, grain and cotton farms in the entire valley. Additional timber adjoins this and can also be secured. There is no plant manufacturing sash, doors, blinds, flooring, etc., between Atlanta and Birmingham, and this timber should prove especially inviting to a concern of that nature. Price $20 per acre in fee.

BODIES STILL IN THE OCEAN

Search for Midshipmen and Sailors Proves Fruitless.

Washington, June 16.—The navy department tonight received a dispatch from Admiral Evans, in command of the fleet in Hampton Roads, stating that the search for the bodies of the six midshipmen and four sailors who, with the fireman, whose body has since been recovered, were drowned by the sinking of the Minnesota's launch last Monday night, was continued today without success. Dragging of the harbor, the dispatch said, would be resumed again tomorrow.

THEATERS.

"The Cowboy and the Lady."

Another splendid bill has been arranged for the fourth week of the George Fawcett company's season beginning at the Grand Opera house tonight, for then they will appear in the great drama of western life, written by Clyde Fitch, entitled, "The Cowboy and the Lady." The play has always been a great favorite in the repertoire of one of America's foremost comedians, Nat. C. Goodwin, and when he has appeared in the hero role, that of Teddy North, he has always met with great success. Mr. Goodwin never played the drama in Atlanta, and consequently it is entirely new to the theater-goers here.

The elements of the wild and woolly west pervade the whole story. The time is the present, and the locale the picturesque country of Colorado. The story tells of the love of Teddy North, a graduate of Harvard, '88, who lives on a ranch in Silverville, for Mrs. Weston, a woman above her station by reason of birth and education, but who is married to a handsome, devil-may-care, reckless and dissolute ranchman. Weston is in love with Molly Larkins—that is, as much in love as a man of his stamp can be—and he persuades her to run away with him. Quickfoot, an Indian halfbreed, loves Molly Larkins, and resents with all the fierceness of his nature the interference of Weston. At the moment that Weston and Molly Larkins are about to leave the house, a shot is fired and the lights are put out, and Weston falls dead. In the dark, Mrs. Weston enters, while from the opposite Teddy North comes in. They grope around in the dark, and finally when the lamps are again lighted, they find themselves by the dead body of Weston. Mrs. Weston believes that Teddy did it, while he in turn believes her guilty. The third act clears up the mystery in a highly dramatic manner, and the ending is most satisfying.

All through the play the intense realism of the hot, fiery nature of the cowboys and others of that fierce country is evident. Scene after scene follow each other in quick succession that keep the interest at fever heat, and it is difficult to conclude, unless one has read the story, how the play will end.

Mr. Regan Hughston will assume the role of Teddy North; June Wheatley the part of Mrs. Weston. Misses Ethel Conroy, Phyllis Sherwood, Grace Sherwood and Messrs. DeWitt Jennings, Brandon Hurst, George Schrader, Frank Craven, Allen Fawcett, Burr Caruth, Sidney Parons and others will be in the cast.

The stage, under the direction of Mr. Allen Fawcett, will present most realistic pictures of the ranch, the dance hall and the Silverville court room. Every attention will be paid to detail in this presentation, and the theatergoers of this city may look forward to one of the most excellent performances of the season.

At the Casino.

Theatergoers who have hungered for a dash of real comedy, with a sprinkling of the vaudeville, will have a feast at Ponce de Leon Casino all of the week that starts tonight, for Harry Linton's "My Wife's Family" is the bill for the week, which will include matinee performances on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons.

This attraction is one of merit. The company is of quality rather than quantity. There are players who have stood the test in the larger cities, and there are specialty numbers than have been featured in the vaudeville houses.

In a great many theaters this season the merry musical farce carried off the records for attendance. The critics who paid a first visit through a call to duty found rare sport in the production, and a great many excellent notices have been put in the "press" book as records of real success in the states.

The farce is in three acts. In the first the mixing up starts, and there is a comedy tangle, that is not unwound until the curtain is about to fall on the conclusion of a story that will be interesting because of its originality.

"My Wife's Family" is one of the comedy successes of Harry Linton, who until he became a producer of musical plays, which position he now holds for one of the big firms of managers, was a vaudeville star of note. His experience all over the country has told him exactly what the people want, and it has been this experience that made up the play that will be the Casino attraction all the week.

At Ponce de Leon.

Thousands sought the comfort and happiness of beautiful Ponce de Leon park yesterday. If ever a gathering of people had the real meaning and experience of that restful comfort, recreation, there was a demonstration at the delightful resort on Sunday.

The beautiful lawns, on the hillside, facing the park, were crowded with people seeking rest, because hundreds of others occupied the comfortable seats and benches. Under the great shelter building the half hundred rocking chairs had occupants, while the pavilion was crowded with those who also sought and found an afternoon and evening of comfort.

The musical programs rendered by Matthiessen's superb band and orchestra proved to be the best of the short season. The director had promised that the offerings in music would eclipse the best of the season and he faithfully kept his word. Some of the numbers were heard for the first time in Atlanta, and have received the indorsement of local music admirers.

Ponce de Leon is growing more and more an Atlanta institution. The barren field of four years ago has been transformed into a wonderful and beautiful resort, maintained and conducted with the highest degree of excellence. While a part of the park is devoted to amusements, embracing the best of the better class of attractions, there are acres of woodland and lawn, set with magnificent flower beds, that make the place a park for recreation, as well as amusement.

General Manager Hugh Cardoza closed contracts on Saturday for three additional features for the amusement part of the park. One of these concessions is a mammoth affair requiring a building of more than 12,000 square feet, and the other two are of the newest first-class park features.

In addition to this addition to the amusements, another car load of park benches will arrive within a few days, and one thousand growing plants are to be set in the lawn opposite the merry-go-round.

Pastime Theater.

Beginning this afternoon with a matinee at 3 o'clock, which is to be repeated at 4 o'clock and again tonight at the "continuous" from 7:30 to 11 o'clock, the new program at the Pastime theater, on Peachtree street, will be given.

Manager Holland, through his booking agency, has secured a number of novel acts, which will include old friends and new favorites. The theater, located in the heart of the city, cooled by electric fans and well ventilated, is one of the chief sources of amusement during the warm summer afternoons and evenings.

In order that all may see the clever show which is being presented, the management has generously distributed a number of free tickets about the city, which are good for admission to any lady at any matinee except Saturday's.

The bill this week, which is bound to please the most exacting and fastidious, includes:

George and Gladys, the premier singing and dancing duo. This couple are the personification of grace in their clever teamwork, and their songs are equally as clever. They sing and dance in novel costumes.

Lewis and Lessinger, whose little "Rube" act was the hit of the bill during the first week in June, will return to this theater to launch their latest venture, which will be equally amusing and mirth provoking.

Tommy Wilks, the glorious voiced singer, whose sweet ballads have made the Pastime theater famous for good singing, will return also, and introduce a number of illustrated songs.

William Thomas, who sings extracts from popular operas while dressed in appropriate costume, will be an added feature.

All of these acts are clever, and are bound to please.

How to Spend a Vacation.

People who find the average summer resort tiresome would do well to consider the advantage of a summer at Brenau (Gainesville, Ga.), where every pleasure and advantage of a summer resort may be combined with study of music, oratory, languages, literature and mathematics under the best masters. One may take as much or as little work as desired, and no examinations are required. Pupils of all ages and both sexes are received.

Elegant accommodations in the college dormitories and chapter houses, delightful cuisine, fine library, beautiful grounds, frequent entertainments, fishing, boating, excursions, grand mountain scenery, bathing in the lake, etc.

The summer session begins June 19; Brenau Chautauqua begins July 18. For full information, address Brenau, Gainesville, Ga.

Cock Crowers—An Extinct Trade.

(From The London Graphic.)

"Cock crowers in the past got good pay," said an antiquary, "but theirs is an extinct business now. Cock crowers were employed by the rich in their town houses to crow the hour. They crowed only the rising hour for the most part, but during Lent they crowed everything—even the halves and quarters—all night long. It was a kind of penance. These men were trained from childhood to crow. Sometimes in their childhood an operation was performed on their throats to give them a more cocklike delivery. An ancestor of mine on the material side was a famous cock crower in his day."
